Swanson Calls On Democrats to Give Him Support

Virginia Senator Unable to Leave His Work to Stump State, Issues a Statement.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Unable, as he says, to address the voters of Virginia personally because of his pressing duties in the Senate, United States Senator Claude A. Swanson, candidate for the Democratic nomination to succeed himself as senior senator from Virginia, has issued a statement setting forth his reasons for asking Virginia Democrast for their support in the August primary.

"I had hoped ere this," he says, "to have been able personally to address you regarding my candidacy in the Democratic primary to be held August 1 to succeed myself in the United States senate, but pressing and important public duties in Congress have prevented me. * * * Being deprived by these circumstances from speaking over the state, which I so ardently desire, I am compelled to content myself with presenting this brief address to the Democratic voters in behalf of my candidacy."

Bespeaking "the most searching investigation" of his record as congressman, as governor and as senator, Mr. Swanson enters into a discussion of that record, saying that "the people of Virginia, after full and fair consideration, have repeatedly accorded me their approval and endorsement" and adds that now that women have become voters he hopes also for their confidence and support, saying that "one of women's missions is to instill conscience and courage in public officials."

Senator Swanson, in his statement declares for further legislation to prevent trusts and combinations and more "rigorous enforcement of existing laws if we are to be saved from industrial servitude;" for further reductions in railroad rates, declaring that "especially are the raes recently imposed upon all shipments to and from Virginia unjust and unfair;" improvement of rivers and of harbor facilities; fuller development by the federal government of Hampton Roads; for the development of the American merchant marine; federal aid for roads; legislation to protect the farmer against combinations to extort unfair prices for agricultural machinery and against impure seed and fertilizers; for credits to farmers by extension of the farm loan system; for all measures tending "to benefit the condition of the laboring classes" and for aid to disabled veterans of the world war.

Regarding agricultural legislation, Senator Swanson says:

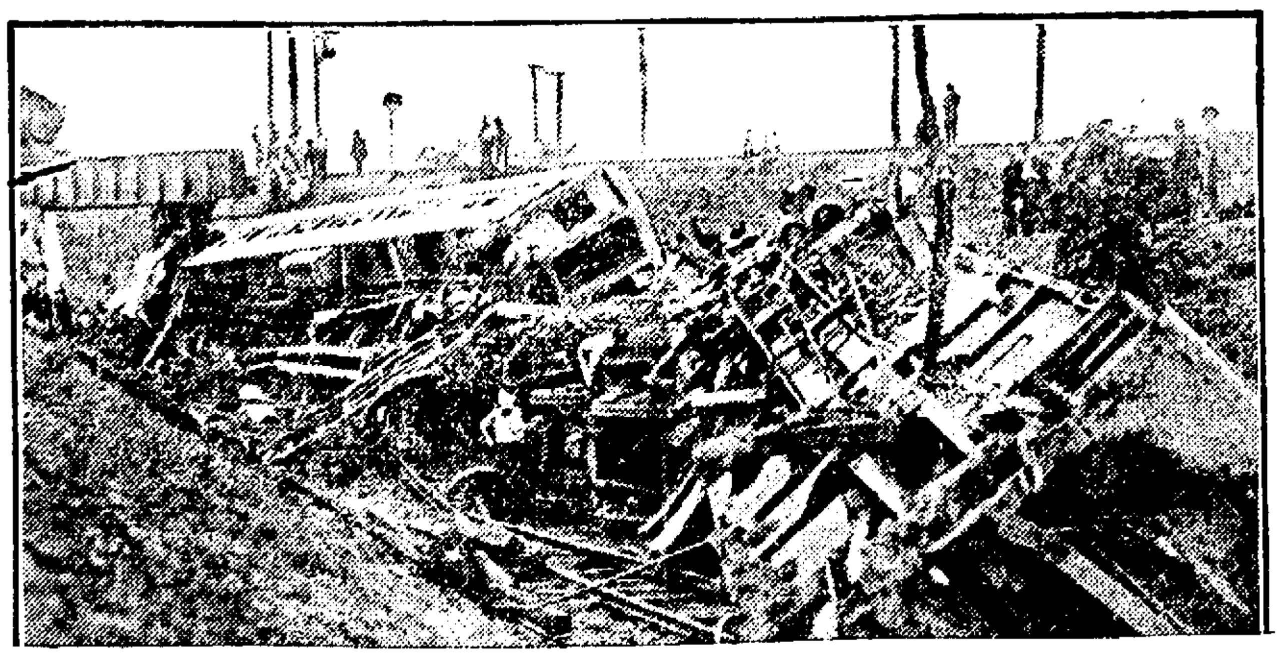

"Senators of both parties, with whom I have cordially co-operated, representing agricultural states have appointed a committee of seven to prepare a bill to be introduced in the Senate and urged for passage which will give full and complete financial relief to the agricultural interests and prevent a recurrence of the deplorable conditions whic hhave occurred in the past. I have been honored by being selected as one of this committee of seven who are busily engaged now in preparing this bill and we hope it will be presented to the Senate and passed before adjournment. I shall exert myself to the utmost to accomplish promptly this needed relief for the farmers."

The senator does not state his position on the pending soldier bonus bill, but does favor aid to the disabled. His statement on treatment of world war veterans follows:

"The federal government should treat with the utmost liberality all those soldiers, sailors and marines who fought in the great world war for humanity. Especially should it show tender and practical solicitude for those who are disabled and to the dependents of the brave men who gave their lives in the line of duty. Our flag would disgrace the sunshine in which it flaunts if it did not thus provide for its valiant defenders. It was my privilege to assist in the estabishment of the war risk bureau which has been of such untold benefit to those who were wounded, and the families of those who perished. I have also favored all legislation to aid in every possible way our wounded disabled and dependent soldiers. Our government should be more generous than it has been in making provision for them. The veterans' bureau should be more liberally and efficiently administered. I have, and will continue to exert myself to the utmost to give every possible relief to those disabled and diseased war veterans, and their families."

In conclusion Senator Swanson points to his support of the league worked in harmony with Woodrow Wilson, to whom he pays tribute, and asks that if his record meets with approval it would be most gratifying to him for the voters of Virginia to support him at the polls on August 1.

ATLANTIC CITY FLIER WRECKED

This shows what was left of the "Midnight Flyer," Philadelphia & Readingtrain, which, loaded with returning Atlantic City Excursionists, left the rails and plunged over an embankment at Winslow Junction, near Atlantic City. Seven were killed and more than 50 injured. Investigators say the switch at the junction had been improperly set, sending the flier onto a sidetrack and a sharp curve which threw it from the rails. John De Walt, 67-year-old tower-man at the junction, was hysterical after the crash.

Vindication Sure Says Trotter In Message to Bee

Revivalist Asked For Personal Expression Wires There Is No Evidence to Support Charges—Speaks of Persecution and Asks For Suspension of Judgment Until Decision.

The Bee this morning telegraphed to Rev. Melvin Trotter at Grand Rapids, Mich., asking him for a personal expression as to his pending case, at the same time informing him of the interest being displayed by the thousands who heard the evangelist during his mission here last October. Early this afternoon, the following reply was received:

"I deeply appreciate the sympathetic interest of my friends in Virginia who are remaining loyal to me in these dark hours of persecution. I am absolutely sure of eventual vindication, as there is not one modicum of evidence to support the scathing charges that have been made against me. I only ask that my dear friends continue to withhold final judgment until all of the evidence in the case has been presented and the arbiter has rendered his decision."

(Signed) "MELVIN E. TROTTER."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., July 6.—How his wife used a pair of binoculars to watch him while he was in bathing at Macatawa park with guests in his rescue mission was told this afternoon by Rev. Melvin E. Trotter, evangelist, in the trial of the separate maintenance suit filed by Mrs. Trotter.

Trotter said that his sister informed him that for some time his wife had been quietly watching him. While he was at his summer home, he testified, a number of women and girls, attendants and workers at the mission, visited him and they went in bathing with him. He said his sister told him how Mrs. Trotter got the glasses and sat on the porch watching him.

"Our Sunday quarrels," he said, were always caused by Sunday night worship when attendants would come forward after service to speak to me. She said many women came to the mission not to worship God but to worship me."

Trotter testified that he lost the superintendency of a rescue mision in Chicago last January because of his wife's accusation that he was the father of the baby born to his former secretary, Miss Florence Moody, in July, 1917. Charles E. Ward, Trotter's chief counsel suggested that Mrs. Trotter always held the Moody affair as a club over her husband's head. When Trotter replied in the affirmative, Ward answered, "What do you mean?"

"She frequently threatened to write to the board of directors of the mission about the Moody affair unless I would confess it. At first she wanted me to confess to one member of the board. I always refused because a confession would have been a lie."

"Did you speak to Miss Moody about her condition before you spoke to Mrs. Trotter?"

"Yes, I reprimanded Miss Moody for not telling me she was in trouble and letting me held her. I was afraid the story would ruin the mission.

Mrs. Lottie M. Trotter's own story of the alleged confession of her husband, of his parentage of Miss Moody's babe, was told by Mrs. Trotter this afternoon. It was while the Trotters were in Florida, late in 1916 Mrs. Trottes said, that the first puzzle of her husband's interest in his secretary was created. Trotter one morning after receiving his mail, declared, "there is something wrong at the mission between Manzel and Miss Moody. We must go home." They left Florida that night. Manzel was a witness for Mrs. Trotter, who denied charges that he was the father of Miss Moody's baby.

Mrs. Trotter said that she had been compelled to caution her husband about his relation with girls of the mission. "I saw things that would make me angry," she added. The first serious trouble came July 13, 1917, when Mrs. Trotter said her husband and Miss Moody went to her home and confessed their relationship and the expected birth of the child.

"I went upstairs, but I felt faint and fell." Mrs. Trotter said. "Mr. Trotter came up and said 'come on, get up, don't act like that.' He brushed his hair and returned to the living room where Miss Moody was sitting. Mrs. Trotter joined them.

Then, according to the plaintiff, Trotter said, "Lottie, I have made an

Attorney General Is Visitor Here

Attorney General John R. Saunders, well known in Danville as result of two or more visits as speaker to this city, is in Danville today on business. He was greeted by a number of friends this morning and he visited the corporation court while it was in session, being welcomed on every hand. He is leaving tonight for Richmond.

Questioned this morning about the new state labor law the attorney-general said that it is being lived up to in all parts of the state and that little complaint has been received at his office, since it went into effect.

The attorney-general will on September 1st have complete charge of the enforcement of the Mapp Act, with the abolition of the office of prohibition commissioned, Mr. Saunders stated today that he intended to retain all of the good men now composing the personnel of the law enforcement machinery. He expects to appoint a conservative lawyer as an aid in coping with the situation to answer the numerous legal enquiries which are continually being sent to the prohibition commissioner and otherwise to assist him in the carrying out of the provision of the act.

Two Convictions In Labor Cases

Convictions have been secured in two cases involving the new labor law. State Inspector L. R. Fair filed charges against G. R. Hamilton and F. G. Bennett, both charged with employing children below the age limit set by the new statute. Both men entered the pleas of guilty while the state inspector requested the mayor to impose the lowest fine possible as this was their first offense. The fines and costs in each case amounted to $14.45.

How the Absent Voter May Cast Primary Ballot

The following information, bearing on the circumstances under which the absent voter may cast his ballot in the coming primary, is of interest just now with probably numbers of Danville voters eligible to cast their votes while away on vacation. The Virginia law is as follows:

"Section 202. Absent voters may vote.—Any voter, only when required by his regular business or habitual duties to be absent from the city, if in a city, or from the precinct, if in a county, in which he is registered, may vote; provided:

"Section 203. Letter of application for ballot, when and how forwarded: He shall make application in writing for a ballot to the registrar of his precinct, not less than fifteen days nor more than sixty days prior to the primary or general election in which he desires to vote, if he be within the confines of the United States.

"Section 208. Receipt, voting and return of ballot.—Upon receipt of the registere letter, forwarded by the registrar, the voter shall not open a sealed envelope, marked "Ballot Within," except in the presence of the postmaster, or his assistant, postal clerk, or rural letter carrier, and shall then and there mark and refold the ballot without assistance and without making known the manner of marking same. He shall then and there place the ballot in the envelope provided for the same, seal the same, and fill in and sign the voucher printed on the back of the envelope, in the presence of the postmaster or oth er persn hereinabove mentioned, who shall witness the same in writing. This envelope, together with the coupon, which must be filled out and signed by the postmaster, or other person as herein provided, shall be enclosed within the envelope directed to the registrar, which shall then and there be sealed, registered, and mailed to te registrar."

Danville Now Has Scout Master

Interest in the Boy Scout movement in Danville has been revived through the bringing to this city by the Danville Rotary Club of Hugh Flannagan of Richmond, a trained scout master, who will spend July and August in Danville organizing several troops and training leaders to carry on the work at the close of his mission here. One of the objects in bringing Mr. Flannegan here is to promote interest in a Summer encampment in the hope of making this a permanent feature of scout work.

Plans are being made already for the holding of a camp this Summer and the site tentatively proposed is near Toshes close to the pond this being a highly desirable place.

Co-operation with the scout master are the Sunday schools the city health department and other boys' work organizations already existing in Danville. For some time there has been one troup of boy scouts this being organized at the Christian church. This will form the nucleus of a larger organization. The scout movement which was started years ago by General Baden Powell, an outstanding figure during the Boer War is becoming increasingly popular in this country and there are few cities of size which do not boast of one or more troupes. The principles of the organization are high and scout work among boys plays an important part in character moulding as well as promoting health.

Incipient Strike At Rock Quarry

Guards Master Situation When Chain Gang's Spokesman Demands Reinstatement of Harry Snead.

A threatened strike at the city rock quarry was quelled at its incipiency early this morning when the chain gang, numbering twenty-two men in all, showed a disposition to decline to work until Harry Snead, chain gang guard recently removed, is reinstated.

Will Hailey, a white prisoner, it was declared by B. V. Seymore, guard in charge of the gang, acted as spokesman for the other men and is reported to have said that he had fifteen months to serve and that he would "rot" before he did a lick of work.

While this altercation was going on the other prisoners, instead of going to work, stood around in groups.

According to Seymore, who was seen at the quarry by a reporter this morning, efforts were made to induce Hailey to abandon his attitude of defiance, but this was unavailing. The man, therefore, was chained to a post with his hands above his head in the sun, and, seeing this action, the other prisoners went to work. According to Seymore, Hailey stood this ordeal for thirty-five minutes and then surrendered. From last reports the "strike" had been broken and Hailey was back at work. Frank Cousins, superintendent of the gang, was present at the time, but later was called to his home by the illness of his wife and his version of the affair has not been learned.

How the "strike" would have developed fully is problematical. The men could not have "walked out" as they are chained and there would have been a dearth of strike breakers. On the other hand, the guards present could not well have compelled them to go to work unless each prisoner was chained up.

Cousins said recently that Snead was the best guard he had ever had and that he was popular with the prisoners who worked willingly for him.

Whether charges will be filed against Hailey and the matter dealt with by the mayor tomorrow remains to be seen.

Frank Cousins was reached early this afternoon, and he corroborated the story told by Guard Seymore. Cousins said that when Hailey refused to work and appeared to be fomenting a defiant attitude on the part of the chain gang, he sought to reason that this was useless, he decided to things over with Hailey, but seeing [illegible] deal with him [illegible]. This, he says, he did, the result being that all of the other members of the gang resumed the task of "making little ones out of big ones." Cousins said that [illegible] anticipated no further labor [illegible] on the part of the [illegible] and he reported this afternoon that things were well in hand.

"We Ain't Single" Announces Wedding

"We ain't single, we must be married!"

This was the wording of a telegram received today by friends of H. E. Allen, Jr., bringing first word of his marriage yesterday at Hendersonville, N. C., to Miss Helen Winn Bass. Mrs. Bass also received a message confirming the news of her daughter's marriage.

Both are well-known young people of this city, Mr. Allen being associated with the Wyatt-Payne Motor Company.

Appeal Unlikely In Cunningham Case

It is unlikely that any appeal will be taken by William E. Cunningham, who was yesterday evening convicted of shooting his wife and sentenced to serve four years in the penitentiary. To a friend today he expressed a desire to hasten to Richmond to start the penal term. He said that he was greatly disappointed over the verdict but added, "I am thankful to those who so nobly stood by me in my trouble."

He expressed no hard feelings towards any person stating "I shall so conduct myself as to retain the good will of the public."

Disorders Grow In Rail Strike

Jewell Is Conciliatory, but Declines to Make First Surrender Move—Picketing of Sops Resorted to Freely.

(By The Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, July 7.—With B. M. Jewell still maintained the conciliatory attitude he assured after the strike of shopmen got under way, but declining to take the first move towards negotiations for peace, an increasing number of outbreaks, disorders marked the closing hours of the first week since the shopmen walked out. The picketing of shops continued in numerous parts of the country while roads continued to employ new men to take the places left by the strikers. Ultimatums to resume work next week or lose all seniority and pension rights stood effective in shops throughout the country.

Blankenship On Trial For Life

Man Indicted for Killing Giles Walker Is Put Before a Jury in Corporation Court.

The trial of William H. Blankenship for the murder of Giles Walker, which was started in the corporation court yesterday evening, was resumed at 9:30 o'clock this morning in order to give as large an opportunity as possible of concluding this major case before adjournment tonight. This, however, appeared unlikely this morning with numerous witnesses to be heard and a large array of counsel to be heard for the defendant. The jury was empanneled yesterday without difficulty soon after the Cunningham verdict had been rendered and the opening statements were concluded before court adjourned and the jury was put in charge of the city sergeant being locked up all night.

The jury is composed of C. R. McLeland, Dave Roman, L. J. Hall, J. E. Scruggs, J. A. Jones, W. E. Masencup, P. H. Neal, L. M. Silverman, J. T. Helms, R. B. Davis, L. Earl Shaff and Hugh Keeling.

This is the first time Blankenship has been tried for his life. A civil action, instituted by the wife of the slain man, to recover $10,000 damages, was heard at the last term of court and the jury returned a verdict for full damages. An appeal was promised but a settlement has been effected since that time $7,500 being the figure, it is understood.

The evidence heard at the civil court hearing is being repeated again today. The shooting took place in Blankenship's room on Lower Main street when he and Walker were engaged in a card game. It was in evidence that there had been bad blood between the two men, an incident occurring during the Danville Fair causing this, but they had made up their differences. At one stage of the game, while eyewitnesses were present, a quarrel arose over a $5.00 gambling debt. Blankenship testified that he drew a revolver and fired when he thought Walker was about to draw a weapon on him. Blankenship fired and killed the man instantly. Search of Walker revealed neither pistol nor knife.

The hearing is being followed by a number of spectators who comfortably filled the courtroom this morning.

Forests On West Coast Are Aflame

Thousands of Men Being Rushed to Fight Fires Raging In Virtually Every Wooded Area.

IN THE POLICE COURT

Only a few cases were on the police blotter to be tried by the mayor this morning and court was in session but a short time.

James Hale and Lindsey Witt were made to pay the costs of warrants charging them with assault on the other, the amount being $3.95 each. Since the fight they have resumed their friendship, this being a factor in the dismissal of the warrants.

Lottie Patterson and Lee Johnson, fined $20 and costs on a statutory charge.

The case of J. Alvin Walker, charged with operating a punch board or a game of chance was set for next Thursday.

—Miss Ruby Kerns, daughter of H. O. Kerns, sailed today from New York on the Rochambeau for Europe where she will spend several weeks touring the principal countries.

Guard Outfits Get Ready For Camp

Preliminary orders have been received by Major H. A. Wiseman, commander of the state National Guard hospital outfit quartered here, regarded the annual summer encampment. This will be held at Virginia Beach August 10th to 24th, the entire Danville personnel participating. Major Wiseman said this morning that he still has vacancies for a few desirable recruits adding that he was desirous of having here for camp with full strength. The hospital company has received all of its equipment with the exception of trucks. Just when these will become available is hard to say as Congress some months ago passed a law directing that all army trucks be turned over to the Agricultural Department.

The Task of [illegible] Captain Asby K. Reires commanding, will go to Camp Meade for Summer maneuvers during the summer, while Second Lieutenant A. A. Hall will take the Coast Artillery band to Fortress Monroe for encampment.

W. E. Cunningham Is Found Guilty And Gets 4 Years

A verdict of guilty and a sentence of four years was the result of the trial of William E. Cunningham, charged with maliciously shooting his wife, Mrs. Cora Cunningham. The case went to the jury at 3:55 o'clock yesterday afternoon and a verdict was returned at 4:37.

Counsel for defense made a motion for a new trial on the grounds that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence and that the court had erred in giving instructions. Judge Withers overruled motion.

Counsel for defense immediately asked for and was allowed suspended judgment, by way of establishing a foundation for an appeal which can be taken any time within the next six months. No move to obtain bail was made.

In giving instructions to the jury the court specified that if defendant was found guilty on the grounds of insanity it should be so written in the verdict, and, under section 4913 of the Virginia code, it would have been incumbent upon Judge Withers to have sent defendant to some State institution until cured. Thus it appear that Cunningham stood to suffer restrictions whichever way the jury might decide.

The arguments in the case started at 11:30 yesterday morning and when court adjourned for lunch Commonwealth's Attorney John W. Carter had spoken for the State and B. H. Custer had addressed the jury in behalf of defendant. In the afternoon Harry Wooding, Jr., spoke for defense and Mr. Carter closed for the State.

Cunningham did not take the stand in his own defense yesterday. Counsel had not decided this point when court adjourned Wednesday.

While it had been expected that Cunningham would be found guilty as charged, the sentence fixed by the jury was heavier than had been currently believed would be imposed. Expressions to be heard around the court room during the trial and immediately after the case went to the jury were to the effect that a verdict of not over two years would be found.

The shooting of Mrs. Cunningham took place late in the afternoon of March 17. Cunningham met his wife at the corner of Ridge and Patton streets and there followed words regarding a ring, which Cunningham demanded. Cunningham is then said to have pulled a 32 calibre pistol and announced his intention of killing his wife. Mrs. Cunningham ran diagonally across Patton street and Cunningham fired, the first shot hitting the bruised place on her head, but not framework of her hat, making a bruised place on her head, but not penetrating the fibres of the hat. The second bullet struck her under her left shoulder blade, hit and glanced round a rib, and later was removed. A third shot evidently went wild. Cunningham then tried to fire again, but the gun failed to fire, either because of a defective cartridge or because the mechanism was stiff. He then threw the gun at his wife, missing her. Mrs. Cunningham by this time had reached the shelter of a neighbor's house and had closed the door in her husband's face.

Cunningham, after the shooting started toward the court house with the intention of surrendering. He was met on the way by a policeman and was taken in custody.

The shooting was preceded by a separation which took place last summer and later divorce proceedings were instituted by Mrs. Cunningham.

It was brought out in the evidence introduced at the trial that Cunningham had brooded a great deal over the separation and this brooding finally led to his rash act.

How the Pope Spends His Day

ROME, July 6.—The daily life of Pope Pius XI at the Vatican is marked by simplicity, incessant work and regular exercise. He labors from 15 to 16 hours a day; sleeps from six to seven and plays two hours. His meals are taken while he examines his mail or gives directions to his secretaries. His play consists of a vigorous military march seven or eight times around the Vatican gardens, making five or six miles, and this he does rain or shine.

His holiness takes personal charge of the direction of the affairs of the church, assigning the routine to his secretaries. The diplomatei letters which attracted so much attention during the Genoa conference fere the personal work of the holy father.

He reads and delves into the rich collection of Vatican books assiduously. So insistent is he, sometimes, in seeking just the thought he wants that some of the prelates have been compelled to use a "gentle violence" in urging him, when the night has crept far on, to seek repose. His energy astonishes the papal household. Recently, when it was suggested to him that he was working far too hard, Pius XI replied:

"You know that when one is made pope, life is finished. All then is in the hands of God. I will do nothing to preserve my life one day more, but I will work until God says, 'It is enough.'"

The pope rises at 6:30 o'clock every morning and says mass in his private chapel before breakfast, which is at 8 o'clock. This meal consists of coffee with milk, bread and butter. The mail is brought in while he eats, and the pontiff divides it among his seven secretaries for attention and answers.

At 9 o'clock, Cardinal Gasparri, secretary of state, is received in the papal chamber every day except Tuesday and Friday. On Tuesday, Monsignor Borgongini-Duca, the pro-secretary for extraordinary ecclesiastical affairs, is received, and on Friday Monsignor Pizzardo, the substitute secretary of state. One hour is assigned to each for the discussion of affairs.

At 10 o'clock the pope commences his private audiences, receiving cardinals, bishops, prelates, high civil personages, diplomats and nobles. These conferences last until 1 o'clock, when the public audiences begin. For an hour the holy father receives pilgrims, associations and various organizations who come to Rome to pay homage to him. At 2 p. m. the master of the papal household, Monsignor Caccia-Dominioni, is received and places before his holiness the list of audiences for the succeeding day and asks for their approval.

The pope lunches usually at 2:30. While he eats alone, there are several of his secretaries present to receive orders and discuss matters particular to their charge. The pontiff also has additional letters read to him and gives instructions for the replies. The meal is simple. His holiness is a great lover of rice done in the Milan style. Then follow cutlets, or perhaps chicken. But the pope is not exacting; he has never been known to refuse any dish placed before him. A few vegetables and some fruit complete the meal.

A feature of the day which is never neglected is the walk. Promptly at 3:30 p. m. the pope enters his carriage and is driven to the gardens. Here he walks five or six miles briskly. Even on this tramp there is work. His holiness will have at his side some prelate with whom he wants to confer [illegible] full details of the [illegible] while walking and issues [illegible].

At [illegible] the pontiff returns to the papal apartments. Audiences begin again and he receives cardinals, archbishops and other prelates in private audiences. These conferences are scheduled to end at 5:30 o'clock, but on occasions of importance they continue much later.

Supper is served as a rule at 9 o'clock. This, too, is very simple, consisting of only one or two dishes. After supper Pius XI goes to work again. At this hour he devotes himself to the [illegible] of important Vatican communications, later going to the library to read and work. On one occasion, recently he kept the library lights burning until 1 o'clock in the morning.

MRS. TROTTER TAKES STAND AGAINST MEL

DETROIT, Mich., July 6.—(Associated Press.)—Mrs. Lottie M. Trotter, who is suing her husband, Melvin E. Trotter, superintendent of the city rescue mission here, for separate maintenance, took the stand this afternoon and reiterated that the evangelist, and his secretary, Miss Florence Moody, had confessed their alleged relationship, and told her Trotter was the father of a child born to Miss Moody.

The parentage question is one of the chief issues in the suit of Mrs. Trotter, who charges infidelity.

Mrs. Trotter's testimony was principally along the lines of a statement she made to the mission board, and which she was presented in court yesterday.

She asserted she had been compelled to caution the evangelist about his relations with girls at the mission, explaining "I saw things that would make me angry."

On Friday, July 13, 1917, she testified, her husband and Miss Moody told her of their difficulties and of the impending birth of the child.

They all began making arrangements for the event, the witness sadi adding she impressed upon Miss Midiy that afterwards, "you must go your way and Trotter must return to mission work." Mrs. Trotter was on the stand when court adjourned.

The evangelist has filed a cross bill for absolute divorce. He denies his wife's charges.

NEGRO IS LYNCHED

SHREVEPORT, La., July 6.—Joe Pemberton, negro, was taken from the Bossier Parrish jail at Benton by a mob early today and hanged to a tree in Black Bayou swamp, two miles from Benton, according to reports reaching here tonight. Pemberton had been arrested and jailed Tuesday night following the shooting of two negro women.

FIRE DESTROYED LARGE BUILDING

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 6.—Fire destroyed a four story building in the business section of this city and caused damage estimated at $300,000. The building, located at the corner of Jefferson and Forsythe streets, was occupied by several firms. Firemen fought for three hours before adjacent structures were out of danger.

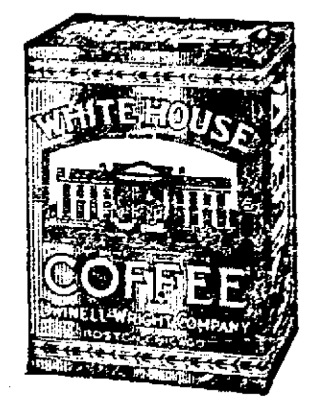

The flames overlapped an alley on one side and dropped sparks on a small hotel, and across the street scattered burning embers on the joint freight warehouse of the Florida East Coast railroad and the Atlantic Coast Line. The heaviest loss was sustained by a storage company which occupied two stories of the building, the loss including much stored furniture.

JAPANESE MAKE DENIAL OF EVASION OF TREATY

TOKYO, July 6.—The Admiralty today issued a formal statement flatly denying the recent report that Japan was invading the Washington Naval Treaty by increasing its construction of auxiliary vessels. The statement, which outlined the tentative auxiliary program, also announced that Port Arthur, taken from the Russians in the Russo-Japanese war, would be abandoned as a naval port.

Japan's auxiliary naval program, according to the Admiralty, while still uncompleted, probably will consist of four cruisers, of 10,000 tons each and four of 7,000 tons each; 24 first-class destroyers, with an aggregated tonage of 35,000 and 24 submarines, with an aggregated tonnage of 28,166. This says the statement, represents a reduction of 13,935 gross tonnage, or one cruiser, 13 destroyers and 24 submarines less than the original program for ships to be completed in 1927.

DOC BYERS CRASHES THRU FENCE; NO ONE HURT

MACON, Ga., July 6.—Doc Byers crushed through the fence at the first quarter turn in the second automobile race on today's card. He escaped injury. In the fifteen mile race, the last event on the program, Johnny Roberts crashed through the fence at the three quarter post on the last lap turning over twice. He also was uninjured.

G. B. Bracken, Jr., won the 15 mile free for all, the feature event, in 14 minutes and 20 seconds. Mrs. O. B. Wright, of Atlanta, won a three mile race from two other entries in 3:22.

Skunk, His Pet, As He Travels Through State

NORTON, July 6.—E. C. Hinkle, of Humphreysboro, Ill., representing the Egyptian Ironworks, is a business visitor in Norton. Mr. Hinkle is carrying with him a young skunk, which he purchased from a small boy who was about to kill it. The little animal is tame and harmless, and Mr. Hinkle will care for it until it is old enough to care for itself.

The offensive odor attributed to a polecat is not noticeable unless the animal is provoked, and with the proper treatment they make ideal house pets, according to Mr. Hinkle.

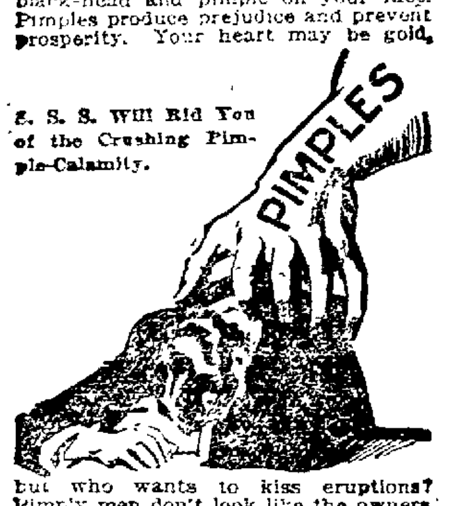

The little skunk was purchased after its mother had been killed for chicken stealing. The farmer's son was about to destroy the baby skunk also, when Mr. Hinkle came to the rescue of the timorous little orphan. It was provided with a comfortable little cage which is strapped to the car in which Mr. Hinkle is touring the country.

County Police And Tars Fight

Numerous Disturbances Reported at Ocean View Between Officers and Sailors—Heads Smashed in Uproar.

OCEAN VIEW, July 6.—Ill feeling between navy sailors and county police has broken out at Ocean View on several occasions lately, and Sunday afternoon the makings of a near-riot resulted in two firemen from the U. S. S. Prometheus being badly hurt. Naval authorities are investigating the occurrences.

Reports of charges being preferred against County Officer Pick, who with Officer L. C. Darden, attempted to arrest the two firemen, were discounted by Sheriff A. A. Wendell, who this morning said the general opinion was that Pick was justified in using force on the sailors.

According to an official report made to the naval operating base, to the dispenary of which the injured men were taken H. R. Hughes, fireman first class, went into a Greek restaurant at 4:30 Sunday afternoon to purchase cigarettes.

The proprietor refused to make the sale, and began abusing the bluejackets, the report says. A fight followed and Officers Pick and Darden came to the rescue of the restaurant man. They placed the sailors under arrest.

About that time the sailor patrol appeared on the scene, and asked the county police to turn the service men over to the petty officer in charge. Both Deene and Hughes were bleeding from gashes in the head, said to have been inflicted by the officers, and the petty officer said he wanted to send them to the hospital.

When the county officers refused to surrender their prisoners, a free-for-all fight ensued, in which a large number of sailors participated, the report showed.

Deene and Hughes were finally rescued and an ambulance took them to the naval base hospital where surgeons dressed their wounds. Hughes had a two and a half inch gash in his forehead and Deene had a cut of similar length on the back of his head.

The sailors were turned over to the executive officer of the Prometheus and sailed with the supply ship for Yorktown Monday.

A man named Holton who was deputized by the county officers was bitten on the arm by one of the sailors. The prints of the bluejackets' teeth were plainly visible on his flesh. He was treated at a drug store.

Considerable secrecy was maintained by the county officers regarding the affair. Sheriff Wendell said this morning that he had not gotten all the facts in the case.

Another fight between county officers and sailors took place last Thursday night at a house of questionable reputation in the outskirts of Ocean View, according to a report today. Knowledge of this occurrence was denied by officers.

The reason for the secrecy regarding the riot Sunday is said to be due to the desire of opponents of annexation in Ocean View and the county to "hold down" stories of clashes between the county police and sailors and civilians in line with the assertion that Ocean View now has ample police protection.

Inquiry into the clash between the Berkley police and the marine guard at the St. Helena reservation which took place on Monday night, was going forward today at St. Helena, but the board of officers appointed by Admiral Andrews to investigate the case, had not completed questioning of witnesses this morning.

It is understood that after the conclusion of the inquiry being conducted by the board composed of Captain Riddle, Lieutenant Commander Rose and Captain Nelson, a second investigation of the matter will be made at the marine barracks, where both Private McDonald, whom, the Berkley officers said, "took their prisoners from them at the point of a pistol, and Privates Martin and Amerald, the two men in the custody of the policemen, are stationed. The two marines were arrested by Patrolman Lowrimer when he found them engaged in a fight on Chestnut street.

Letter Absolves Dead Man, 40 Years a Convict

AUSTIN, Tex., July 6.—A. L. George who died a year ago as the ward of a relief organization, after he had served nearly forty years in prison on a murder charge, received posthumous absolution here today with the publication of a letter purporting to be a lost confession of the crime.

George was convicted after the killing of Ed Konerick in Hottentot, Tex., in 1884. He went to prison protesting his innocense, but served his innocence, but served his full term and came out a little more than a year ago old and broken in health. He fell ill and was taken to a hospital where he died. In his possession was a letter dated Hull's [illegible], Tex., June [illegible], 1890 and signed [illegible]. It said Sharp killed Konerick after a quarrel.

John Boatwright Wins Tournament

The flag tournament at the Danville Golf club was played last Tuesday despite the unpleasant weather and frequent rain. Devotion to the game was shown by the appearance at the links of between 35 and 40 players who entered the tournament. John Boatwright was declared the winner, he completing the round within the number of strokes allotted to him. The recent rains have increased the course and the links are crowded every evening.

Situated on the boundary between [illegible] and the Tyrol Erl has been described as "a jewel in a casket of nature's own fabrication." The play was first produced there in 1565, according to tradition and recently has been presented in the "2" years, that is, in 1892 and 1902 and 1912.

RESTRAINING ORDER TO PREVENT INTERFERENCE

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., July 6.—A temporary restraining order forbidding striking shopmen from interfering with the operation of Illinois Central trains, hindering employes of the road and from establishing "unlawful" picket lines, was issued by Federal Judge English here late today.

The order, returnable July 17, was issued after counsel for the Illinois Central presented affidavits that there had been violence at Mounds.

Vindication Sure Says Trotter In Message To Bee

ass of myself and this girl. I have always been fast enough to get into trouble and its always been up to you to get me out."

Mrs. Trotter said she asked Trotter if his relation with the girl accounted for her condition and that he said it did and that she asked Miss Moody, "Do you mean to tell me that this man is to blame for it?" and that the secretary replied, "Yes, he is."

"You believe your wife is a scheming plotting degenerate?"

"I do. That Moody story is only one instance."

Such was the question put to Trotter, by Mrs. Trotter's counsel, Attorney Fred P. Geib.

"She is continually talking of my being too free with other women," Trotter continued.

"Isn't it true your wife cautioned you about your actions with Ivah Livingston, Sides, Ives and others?" Gieb asked.

"Yes."

"And you resented it?"

"Yes, when she said too much." Trotter admitted Adrian Otte a member of the board, did once speak to him about a woman, who, in a crowded room threw her arms about Trotter and kissed him.

The first evidence to support Mrs. Lottie M. Trotter's charge that her husband confessed to her that he was the father of the baby born to his secretary, in 1917, was introduced today.

The evidence was in the form of a statement that Mrs. Trotter wrote to the board in control of the rescue mission, of which Trotter is superintendent. The statement was identified by Mr. Trotter on the stand under cross examination. His wife, when he heard of what she had done, was also identified.

"The first break came Friday, July 13, 1917. That morning, down at the summer cottage, Mel called me into the sun parlor and closed the door and asked me what I thought was the matter with Moody, I answered that I thought she was about to be confined. He pretended to be much surprised, and said, 'What makes you think so?' he said 'by her looks and actions.' He said 'Well, if you think so, you ought to talk to her.' I said to him, 'Why don't you talk to her?'

"Mel said it was his place to tell her, but wanted me to and as I had always tried to do everything he asked of me I said, 'All right. I will.' (I was hoping that God would bring things out right in a quiet way.) He said, 'Get ready and we will go up town.' So we came to Grand Rapids that same morning and had my class of poor women sewing upstairs. He looked as though he wanted to say something. Then he said:

"'Lottie, I have made an ass of myself with this girl. I have always been fast enough to get myself into trouble but you have always been the one to help me out. Now you will have to help me out of this.'

"Then I said, 'Do you mean to tell me that you are to blame for her condition?'

"He said, 'She says so and I guess it must be so.'

"Then I turned to her and said, 'Moody, do you mean to tell me that this man is to blame for it?' and she said, Yes, he is.'.

"Then I said, 'This is a fine note,' and Mel said, 'Oh, Lottie, don't say any more about that. I know how awful it is. Just tell us how to get out of it.'

"So I jumped at the conclusion that both were sorry for the past and I was willing to help them out. Then we made some plans of how to get out of the trouble. I was to take her away for a trip to Boston or a few months and bring her back well. Nobody would be wise as to what happened. But, instead, she was taken to the Blodgett hospital Friday the 20th and the child was born Sunday July 22. And so far as I can see, there has never been any repentance for that sin."

The love charges that Mrs. Trotter has preferred against her husband, had their origin in her counsel's mind Mr. Trotter will contend when the defense wheels into action this week.

That Mrs. Trotter has never had any substantial basis for her belief that her husband was the father of the mission love baby, born to Miss Moody, will be the rebuttal of the defense. The first time Mrs. Trotter ever made that acusation, according to the story the evangelist will tell from the witness stand, she said the Lord had appeared to her in a vision and by a supernatural revelation informed her that her husband was guilty of misconduct with at least one of the feminine members of the mission flock.

It was not until some time later that Mrs. Trotter began to tell her friends of the alleged "confessions" of Miss Florence Moody and the evangelist in which both are said to have confessed while down on their knees before her in the parlor of the Trotter home in 1917.

In an effort to refute Mrs. Trotter's statement to a friend that she could not keep a domestic about the house any length of time because Mr. Trotter persisted in annoying them, the defense promises to produce as material witnesses every girl retained in the Trotter home for the past 25 years, counsel stated today. Although much stress will be placed upon emphasizing the story of the "vision" and other alleged erratic statements and acts of Mrs. Trotter including the occasion when she violently attacked Miss Moody her "rival" in the weird mission triangle, the defense will not introduce any alienist or other expert witnesses in an effort to prove that the wife of the mission head is mentally irresponsible.

Mrs. Trotter has alleged that her husband planned committing her to a sanitarium following her love charges.

"We'll just let Mrs. Trotter's words and actions speak for themselves," said one of the defense attorneys today.

"We have no intention of prosecuting the insanity charge beyond merely setting forth the conditions that Mr. Trotter has been confronted with."

GRAND RAPIDS PEOPLE MOSTLY FOR EVANGELIST

[illegible], N. C., July 6.—W. [illegible] Morrison who returned yesterday from Grand Rapids, Mich., brings information [illegible] upon the [illegible] brought in that city by Mrs. Trotter against her husband, Melvin E. Trotter, evangelist and head of the Grand Rapids Rescue Mission, for separate maintenance. A prophet may not be without honor save in his own country, but Mel Trotter is mostly honored in his home city, where he and his work are best known according to Mr. Morrison.

The sentiment in Grand Rapids, declared Mr. Morrison, is overwhelmingly on the side of Mr. Trotter, so far as the better elements of the community are concerned. As he saw the situation and learned of it at first hand, Mrs. Trotters' suit is giving support only by the elements that resent the attitude he assumed in bygone fights that resulted in elimination of the segregated district and the saloon. These people, Mr. Morrison states, appear to be willing to go to any lengths in order to destroy the man and his usefulness. He states further that those in position to know accept it as a fact that Mrs. Trotter is unbalanced of mind. In this he is borne out by the testimony of Dr. Chas. F. Myers, of this city, who has known Mel Trotter and his wife for a number of years.

Indicative of the regard in which Mr. Trotter and his work are held in Grand Rapids, Mr. Morrison says that not one of the Grand Rapids newspapers has admitted a line of the evidence submitted to its news columns: that one of these papers defended the position editorially with the argument that the reputation of the argument for the reputation of work should not be destroyed unless the charges preferred against him are proved to be true. This attitude of the Grand Rapid press called for special comment in Editor and Publisher, of New York, in its issue of July 1, as follows:

"The Grand Rapids Press, Herald and News have refused to publish any of the details in the sensational suit brought by Mrs. Trotter against her husband, Mervin E. Trotter, evangelist and head of the Grand Rapids Rescue Mission. Mrs. Trotter is suing for separate maintenance. This decision to publish nothing more than bare announcement of the trial has chaused general discussion in that city and resulted in the Grand Rapids Press editorially defending its position."

Crop Conditions In Old Dominion

High temperature prevailed; scattered local showers occurred daily. While moisture was plentiful at some points, other sections were parching and dry. At the close of the week cooler weather accompanied by apparently more general rain was overspread the state. Crops generally made satisfactory progress. Corn and garden truck show the effect of dry, hot weather locally, but being in a good state of cultivation, have as yet been practically undamaged. Wheat harvest is nearing completion and threshing has begun: the yield is reported as disappointing. Winter oats is good and being cut, there has been further damage to spring oats by rust. Cotton, sweetpotatoes, and tobacco continue good, and truck is still plentiful. Peanuts are irregular and poor due to much necessary replanting and continued unsatisfactory stands.

—Misses Mary L., Ruth and Mr. E. L. Anderson of Knoxville Tenn., are visiting their sister Mrs. S. C. Smith Mt. View.

—Mrs. L. B. Flora and daughters, Jane and Helen, leave tomorrow for a visit to Blue Ridge Springs. They will be gone about ten days.

Woman Slain Not Real Mrs. Perry

SUFFOLK, July 6.—Mrs. Laura Forrest Perry, who lost her life in the Richmond tragedy was not the legal wife of Francis Perry, who killed her.

Mrs. Francis Perry, Perry's legal wife, lives in Nansemond county, Va., and is there today.

Francis Perry was married to Mary Frances Eason, of Nansemond county on July 6, 1918, and although Mrs. Perry had entered suit for divorce upon the grounds of desertion, the divorce had not been granted. Commonwealth's Attorney S. E. Everett, of Suffolk, was employed by Mrs. Perry for divorce from Francis Perry in 1919 upon moral grounds, but was lost upon a technicality.

Thereupon in 1922 Mrs. Perry entered the suit which was pending at the time of the tragedy.

Perry, according to the marriage license which is in the possession of S. E. Everett, Mrs. Perry's attorney, was born in Sweden, and at the time of his marriage to Miss Eason, was in the United States navy.

Herr Bergdoll Is Right

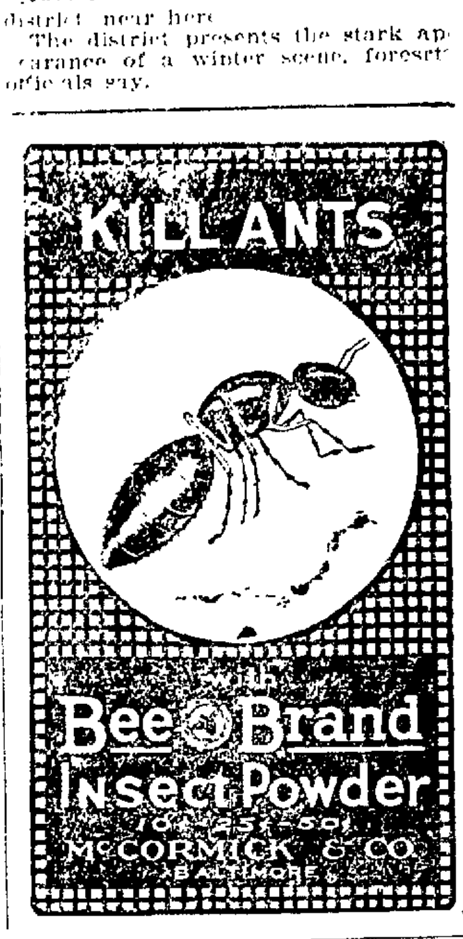

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The Government is now ready to prove that Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, army deserter, has taken the necessary steps to become a German citizen, and that his property in this country should be held under the Alien Property Act until courts decide what shall be done with it. Approximately $800,000 worth belonging to Bergdoll is now held by Alien Property Custodian Miller.

Early next fall the court will pass upon the legality of seizure by Col. Miller. The War Department still hopes Bergdoll will be brought back here and tried as a deserter.

Caterpillars Strip Huge Forest Tract

REGINA, Sask., July 6.—Caterpillars have eaten up the foliage of 85 square miles of forests in the Kipling district near here.

The district presents the stark appearance of a winter scene, forestry officials say.

SHALL THE PEOPLE RULE?

News clipping from Danville Register of June 15th, under heading: "Politics on Menu at Dinner at Country Club."

"Colonel A. B. Carrington, one of the few gentlemen present on this interesting and rather unique occasion, is alleged to have said that it was unfortunate that a man of Mr. Talbott's calibre had to go around begging people to vote for him, (or words to that effect) and he is alleged to have asserted that if Mr. Talbott were renominated on August 1st it would be the last time he would be subected to this ordeal. This was construed to mean that the General Assembly would be asked to amend the charter of the city so as to make the superintendent elective by the Council, instead of by the people."

This is the most important and highest salaried office in the city government. Do you wish to turn it over to a few, or do you think the people can be trusted to select the right man for the job? Should this official be the servant of all the people and held directly responsible to those who pay the bills?

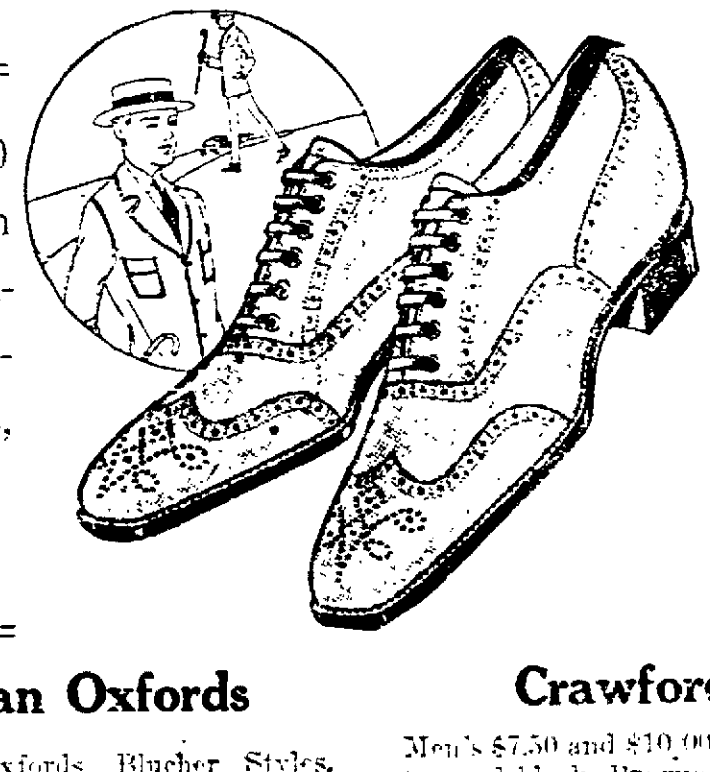

Your vote will decide these questions.

Danville, Va., July 5, 1921. E. H. MARSHALL.

Japan Alone Increases Business With America

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Japan is the only major power whose trade with the United States during the 11 months ending with May exceeded that of the previous 11 months, as is shown by an analysis of foreign trade made public today by the Department of Commerce.

The statistics in the report are comparative between May of this year and May, 1921, and for the two last 11 months periods. For both periods imports and exports from and Japan Japan increased. Trade with Germany showed an increase in May as compared with the previous May, but a decrease for the 11 months.

Exports to Japan jumped from $172,124,473 for the 11 months ending May, 1921, to $232,252,953 for the next period, and from $12,237,279 in May, 1921, at $16,650,577 for May this year. Exports to Germany for May, 1922, were $25,105,460, as against $20,455,152 for the same month last year. Between the two 11 months periods there was a decrease from $351,073,834 to $322,248,560.

Despite this decrease the analytical statement discloses that the United States is doing a larger business with Germany than with any other foreign country, with the exception of the United Kingdom and Canada. Exports to Germany in May exceeded by $6,000,000 the exports to France and by $10,000,000 the exports to Japan.

Imports from Germany are still well below shipments from France, the United Kingdom, Canada, Mexico, Cuba, Brazil or Japan, but are steadily climbing and unless hindered by a prohibitive tariff will, within a few months, exceed the imports from several of these countries.

Priest Is Accused By Fellow-Priest

BALTIMORE, July 5.—Probably the first case on record of a priest charging a brother priest with feloniously entering his premises was lodged at the northeastern police station yestreday, when the Rev. James Laloudas accused the Rev. Christ Angelopoulos of breaking into the rectory adjoining the Greek Orthodox church at Homewood avenue and Chase streets. The police have not yet been able to locate the Father Angelopoulos to ask his version of the affair.

According to Father Laloudas, Father Angelopoulos tore the hinges from the door of the rectory during his absence Saturday night and later performed a christening in the church. The charge came as a climax to a long series of disagreements since early in May, when both priests claimed the pastorate.

At that time Father Angelopoulos, who claimed to have been appointed by the representative of the Patriarch of Constantinople, arrived to take over the church, and there began the proverbial tug of war when Greek meets Greek.

Father Laloudas asserted that the other priest's authority was not recognized by the Holy Synod at Athens, whereas his own appointment had been issued by the Metropolitan Germanus Trioanus.

The church split into two factions, but at an election the congregation overwhelmingly supported the old priest. Several of the members brought the matter before Judge Carroll T. Bond in the Circuit court and asked an injunction against the installation of Father Angelopoulos. Judge Bond, however, refused to sign the injunction, and those who had opposed the move announced that the new priest would take charge.

Feeling that possession is nine-tenths of the law and that he had nine-tenths of the congregation with him, the old priest refused to move, and for a time it appeared that Father Angelopoulos had surrendered his claim. Residents of the neighborhood say that peace and harmony has reigned during the last month and that the new priest had not been seen in the vicinity until a small crowd gathered for the christening.

Political conditions in Greece and the Greek church for the last few years are said to be responsible for the breach. Members of the congregation split into two factions, similar to those in the government—the liberals and hte royalists. Dispute over the actual head of the church, it is said, began when King Constantine left the throne and the Metropolitan at Athens was deposed.

Arrest of Men Charged With Theft of Postal Millions

Postoffice officials believe they have rounded up the leading figures in the series of postal robberies occurring in many cities throughout the nation in the past year in the arrest of Charles Lambert, Charles Heins and Edward Bryce in New York. Police say $100,000 recovered is part of the $2,000,000 loot taken from a New York mail truck last October. Film Censors In Merry London

LONDON, July 6.—(United Press.)—London's super drug-film, "Cocaine," has been banned.

Film censors viewed it, wrinkled disapproving eyebrows, and gave it the gate.

They felt that in view of the recent vice splurge, the dope picture had best remain unshown.

Film banning occupies a band of dismal antediluvians seven hours a day. They rest of the time they play golf, in order to quicken their eyesight. Among the things which they must ban on sight are:

Drunkenness.
Vice.
Too much leg.
"Snappy" dresses.
Irreverence.
Bedroom scenes of doubtful quality.
Realistic murders.
Crucifixion.
Guillotinings and executions with blood ad lib.
Impropriety of action.

KLAN DISBANDS IN CALIF. TOWN

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., July 6.—The Taft, Cal., provisional klan number three, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, disbanded on June 16, 1922, destroyed all robes in the possession of members and turned in other equipment to klan headquarters at Los Angeles, according to announcement made today by Frank Page, "exalted cyclops" of the Taft body at the time of the disbanding.

A statement by Page said "we repudiate any act of lawlessness committed in the name of the klan and we will do our utmost to bring to justice anyone committing such act."

SHOOK HANDS WITH CHARLES I AND WITH HENRY THE VIII

LONDON, July 6.—(United Press.)—There is a man alive today who has shaken hand in the flesh with King Henry VIII and with King Charles I.

This is not fiction, but absolute fact.

How this near-miracle came about has never before been told in any newspaper or magazine. Indeed, there are in England today but a handful of people who know the weird story.

To appreciate it properly, it is necessary to go back to that fateful day when Charles I, King of England, was executed with the headsman's axe outside his palace in Whitehall, London.

Relatives claimed the body, and one of their party, a devoted retainer of the King, cut the little finger off his right hand as a keepsake of the dead monarch.

In due course the retainer died, and the finger passed to his heirs. They, in turn, handed it down, until, twenty odd years ago, it was in the possession of the late Archbishop of Canterbury.

For several years the Archbishop had been troubled with dreams. He would wake up with a feeling that that the long dead King wanted something which was in his possession.

Then one day he realized that it was the finger of the monarch that was at the root of the trouble.

As a devout churchman, the archbishop believed that the spirit of the dead king was unhappy at the loss of the finger. He applied for an audience with the late Queen Victoria, and one fine morning found the archbishop, seated at her side, requesting permission to open the coffin and replace the finger.

Victoria Gave Consent.

Now Victoria realized that to open a royal coffin meant a special Act of Parliament, and that such an act would cause no little stir among the members of the house, who have always been against the opening of tombs. So, officially, she refused permission, but unofficially she gave her consent to the grave being opened.

A few weeks later, one winter night, a closed carriage drew up outside the burial chapter at Windsor of the kings and queens of England. In the carriage were the archbishop, the confidential valet (alive to this day), one of the queen's chamberlains, and the heir of the archbishop (now also dead).

The carriage rolled away, and the little party climbed the snow-covered steps of the chapel, shut the great linen-fold panelled door behind them and descended into the royal vaults.

They soon found that which they had come to seek—a short wooden coffin, beautifully carved, screwed into the top a golden plate bearing the royal arms and the inscription of the name and titles of King Charles I of England. The little party were confused. Charles they knew to have been a tall man, and here was a squat, stout coffin, utterly unadaptable to a man of Charles' stature. They decided, however, after a short consultation, to open the coffin. They lifted off the lid.

There, lying on his back, little velvet cap on his head, ermine cloaked, bearded, robed with the garter, and, just as Holbein had painted him lay Henry VIII, that famous monarch of many wives.

Hands Crumbled.

The party leaned forward, scarcely able to believe their eyes. The body, mummified, was in apparent perfect state of preservation. One of the men, the archbishop, lifted one of the hands and, while he did so, the confidential valet shook the other, to see if the finger was in place. The hands crumbled to dust.

They closed the coffin, after the archbishop had read a prayer over the body of the dead king.

Meanwhile the queen's chamberlain attracted their attention to a corner of the vault. He had found a long coffin resting on a beautiful alabaster slab, inscribed with the titles of King Henry VIII—a long coffin such as should have been that of King Charles.

They opened the coffin.

Before them lay the figure of a handsome cavalier, long haired, his wrists and shoulders covered with Mechlin lace. But this man, they thought, could never have been Charles I, for he had a head. Then they noticed that around the neck of the sleeping man was a black velvet band. The head had been placed close to the neck after being severed by the executioner's axe, and covered with the velvet band.

The [illegible] meanwhile, called the archbishop's attention to one of the fingers of the right hand, which was missing.

The Missing Finger.

The old archbishop produced the [illegible] from its silver case and [illegible] the hand of the [illegible] to lay the finger [illegible] the hand. It was too late. [illegible] the valet held the hand, it crumbled away.

They [illegible] another prayer was spoken [illegible] forever.

The explanation, of course, lies in [illegible] the golden name plates of the coffins screwed that of King Henry on to the coffin of King Charles and that of the decapitated [illegible] that of "Bluff King Hal."

Arrest Of Five May Clear Drug Death

NEW YORK, July 6.—In the arrest of five men as grand larceny suspects late yesterday afternoon at No. 210 West 63rd Street, detectives of Chief Inspector Lahey's staff said they hoped to solve the mystery in the death, apparently from drug poison, ing of H. G. Bentley, 35, an actor, in the hallway of the same house last Saturday night.

The body was not identified until Monday, an Elk's pin he wore assisting in the identification. Bentley was a son of W. H. Bentley, of No. 4629 Aldrich avenue, Minneapolis.

The prisoners were arrested on suspicion of having fleeced Gordon Poole, of No. 978 South street, Rosedale, Boston, a contractor, out of $105 while matching coins June 18 at West 55th street and 12th avenue.

The men said they were Edgar Sutton, 50, no address; James Patterson, 35, No. 24 8West 97th street; George Russell, 38, No. 148 West 64th street; William Cahill, 33, and Charles Earl, 35, No. 248 West 97th street; George They were taken to police headquarters. All claimed to know nothing about Bentley's death.

Poole, who was here on his vacation, has since returned to Boston, but Detective Barron said he would be asked to come to New York to identify the prisoners.

According to Detective Barron, who questioned the prisoners concerning Bentley's death, they denied any knowledge of it. It was said to be only a coincidence that the arrests were made in the same house.

Blown To Pieces By Old Cannon As Family Sits Near

NEW YORK, July 5.—Ralph Reynolds, 27, found an old iron cannon in the rear of his home, No. 8 Bulkry avenue, Port Chester, N. Y., yesterday afternoon, and, as his wife and two children waited on the porch, went to the woodshed and began ramming the powder from two dozen giant firecrackers into the muzzle, despite the warning of a relative. The experiment proved fatal to him.

A few minutes after Louis Witt, a cousin left the shed, there was an explosion and the side of the small building was blown out. Reynolds, his body terribly torn, was found lying in the the debris. He died while being taken to the United hospital.

It was not known how the powder became ignited. The cannon had been used on the Fourth of July for years by Reynold's late uncle.

Poincare Explains Smile In Cemetery

PARIS, July 5.—A photograph in which Premier Poincare and Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, appear to be smiling while passing through the Verdun cemetery provoked a lively incident in the chamber of deputies otday.

Deputy Vaillant-Couturier, Communist, called attention to the picture, interrupting the speaker to do so, saying, "I do not smile in the presence of the dead."

The premier jumped to his feet and demanded that the deputy explain himself. M. Vaillant-Couturier then endeavored to extend the discussion to the question of responsibility for the war, but M. Poincare insisted on having his say about the picture, explaining that it was taken when the sun was shining brightly in his eyes and those of Ambassador Herrick.

He declared that it was an abominable act to use this picture as propaganda and then announced himself ready to accept debate on responsibility for the war.

Immediately the Communist deputy pleaded lack of documents for such debate and asked for a postponement. The Premier assured the chamber an opportunity would be given to thresh out the question thoroughly before the present session closed.

China Sees the Poorhouse Just Around Corner

PEKING, July 6.—(United Press.)—Just one definite result is apparent after China's annual political and military orgy.

China is poorer.

As thoroughly as gunpowder, political intrigue and public wastefulness can do it, the country has been driven one step and almost the last step toward large foreign loans and consequent foreign financial supervision.

Other results, and among them some good ones, there may be, but they are not now apparent.

The period of four preceding the war, the ten days of actual warfare and the recovery period took a solid month out of China's producing year. Merchants in that period refused to ship goods for fear trains would be seized by soldiers. Then the roads were cut by [illegible] cheaper commodities were not transported locally. Money was withdrawn from banks and secreted and stocks of merchandise in the war area were hidden. Cutting of telegraph lines paralyzed business throughout the country. Food became expensive.

Government and people suffered alike, for China's greatest income for administrative purposes is from the railroads and telegraphs.

The country comes out of the so-called war in a weakened condition to take up the task of self-restoration. For this work there is not a dollar in the treasury nor is there likely to be. All the dollars that will come in for many years are pledged for debts contracted by wasteful administrations.

A large foreign loan, with resulting foreign supervision, or the poorhouse, is just around the corner. No strong man has appeared to guide the country out of the wilderness. Internecine wars have developed soldiers, but not statesmen.

Not all of the tasks confronting the country grew out of the Washington Conference. Some of them are "holdovers," but these must be worked out along with the others if China is to make good with the friendly nations. In order to win the things she demands here and keep up her head among the nations she must in the next few years:

Purchase the Shantung railway from the Japanese;

Reimburse the Japanese for improvements made in the city of Tsingtao and Kiaochow leased territory;

Pay England an equitable amount for improvements at Weihaiwei, the concession soon to be returned;

Build a railway from Weihaiwei to some point on the Shantung railway;

Pay Japan for the cables, telegraphic and wireless stations taken over under the Nine Power treaty.

Settle with foreign firms for $57,000,000 worth of railroad rolling stock purchased on credit last year, $11,000,000 of which is due and unpaid now;

Disband a majority of her soldiers and provide employment for them.

These projects if carried out will cost not far from $500,000,000 Chinese currency. Where is the money coming from? It isn't coming at all unless there is a mighty apparent change in Chinese conditions.

He Gets Wedding Permit; Her Parents Get Warrant

ROCKVILLE, Md., July 5.—As a result of the issuance by the clerk of the Circuit Court here Saturday of a license for the marriage of Miss Frances C. Collins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frances E. Collins, 4525 Warrenton avenue, Tenleytown, D. C., and Clarence S. Gray, of the vicinity of Silver Spring, this county, Mrs. Collins came to Rockville today and swore out a warrant charging young Gray with perjury.

Mrs. Collins charges that in making application for the license Gray made oath that the girl was 18 years of age when, she asserts, he knew she was but 16.

The couple, it is stated, had planned to have the ceremony performed Saturday afternoon or evening, but their arrangements were frustrated by Mrs. Collins, who had been downtown shopping and who reached home just as the young folks were about to take a little automobile ride. Mrs. Collins, so she explained, "smelt a rat" and would not permit her daughter to go with Gray. That the license had been obtained was not learned by the girl's parents until Sunday morning. Gray is 26 years old.

ROCKEFELLER'S DIMES.

The world's richest man, John D. Rockefeller, goes to a circus. He laughs at the clowns, feeds peanuts to the elephants, applauds the hair-raising acrobatic acts, and buys pink lemonade and "hot dogs." All around, it is a complete circus day, even to his daughter-in-law having her tintype taken on the Midway. And it probably is a safe bet that he had the best time on circus day that he had had in a year, though the diversion was of the inexpensive sort within the means of the man who can count the dollars of his weekly pay envelope on his fingers.

The greatest joys of life, for rich or poor, involve simple things. And our greatest pleasures are inexpensive. Money is desirable, but it is not everything. This may be platitudinous. Most platitudes, however, are true and philosophical.

The mob that followed John D. Rockefeller about the circus was most interested in the dimes he gave to 200 of the fun producers.

Observe his system—only one dime to each person, and always a bright, spanking-new dime, fresh from the mint.

John D. always carries a pocketful of dimes—and never appears in public without distributing some of them.

He is rich enough to distribute $5 gold pieces. They, however, would be quickly spent. He is shrewd enough to know that every one would save a dime from the world's richest man, as a "lucky piece." In his unique psychological way, Rockefeller is trying to impress the public with the value of the humble dime. Pennies might be hurled back at him in derision, but none except drunken men ever threw away a dime. Probably John D. is like the rest of us, and would spend dollars of time trying to recover a dime lost through a sidewalk grating.

Rockefeller, with his dimes, is spreading the wisdom of thrift with all the cunning theatrical instinct of Phineas T. Barnum. After all, it was thrift that gave him his start, back in the days when he was a bookkeeper toiling for $35 a month. He learned to handle dimes before he was able to handle dollars. So did Henry Ford, when he was a machinist. So did Schwab, when he was a day-worker in the steel mills. Comfortable financial independence is a matter of plain old-fashioned thrift, though expanding the modest fortune to a gigantic fortune depends on ability and chance.

DRAKES BRANCH, Va., July 7.—(Grapevine Wireless.)—Open season for summer dancing at seaside and mountain resort. Everybody on the dance floor today may not be executing the Conversation Walk. But, verbal patter between partners often keeps apace with the pitter-patter of their feet on the waxed floor. Some of the conversation doesn't mean anything. Much of the talk is mere gossip. And naturally, most of the sayings are about dancing and thoughts akin to the light fantastic. The steppers usually converse merely for the sake of sociability. Often the words that pass between strutting or gliding couples are highly humorous although said in all seriousness. Dance jokes in the current press echo some of these conversations. On the screen, "Topics of the Day" Films present these jokes with laughing success. Now, whether you dance, or whether you are a wall or a wallflower, you ought to find some smiles in these dance floor echoes:

Tit For Tat.

She (Jolly)—I wonder where all the men who can dance are.

He (feeling his sore foot)—In dancing with the girls that can dance, I guess.—N. Y. Univ. Medley.

Pretty Poultry.

She—I wonder why they put cornmeal on the floor when they dance?

He—Oh, that's to make the chickens feel at home.—The Leatherneck.

The Reason.
(By Wright Field.)

He wonders why so many men
  Have friends when he has none;
He wonders why, when folks are glad
  He never shares the fun.
He feels left out, and doesn't know
  That he's to blame the while.
The reason is not far to seek—
  It hurts his face to smile!

He has a lot of enemies
  He never meant to make;
He never stoops to trifles done
  For simply friendship's sake.
He doesn't think small courtesies
  Are really worth the while.
And when he does a generous thing
  It hurts his face to smile!

The simple little things of life
  That pleasure you and me,
He does not care to cultivate,
  Too dignified is he!
He ran a race for office once
  And lost by many a mile,
And he never knew the reason was
  It hurt his face to smile!

No little children ever dare.
  To climb upon his knee;
No strange dog ever leaps at him
  With tail awag with glee.
Nobody ever tells him any jokes
  He's lonely all the while,
And he knows not what he's missed
  because
  It hurts his face to smile.

Deucedly Clever.

A young Englishman was walking up and down the platform of a country railroad junction, trying to see a car that had a vacant seat. He didn't find it, and assuming an official air, he walked up to the last car and announced in stentorian tones:

"All out/here! this car isn't going."

There were exclamations low and deep from the occupants of the car, but they all piled out and made their way to cars ahead. The smile on the young man's face increased as he took possession of a seat and appropriated another for his luggage.

"Ah," he murmured. "It's a grand thing to be born clever! Now I wish they'd start."

[illegible] the station master put his [illegible] at the door: "Are you the smart young man who said this [illegible]?"

SCARAMOUCHE

by Rafael Sabatini

"Uncle," Aline said, leaving Andre and crossing to M. de Kercadiou, "you make me ashamed of you! To allow a feeling of peevishness to overwhelm all your affection for Andre!"

"I have no affection for him. I had once. He chose to extinguish it. He can go to the devil; and please observe that I don't permit you to interfere."

Andre-Louis shrugged his shoulders and hung his head. He had come there so joyously, in such yearning, merely to receive a final dismissal. He looked at Aline. Her face was pale and troubled; but her wit failed to show her how she could come to his assistance. His excessive honesty had burnt all his boats.

She answered his look by a glance at her furious uncle, a faint shrug, and a lift of the eyebrows, dejection the while in her countenance.

It was as if she said: "You see his mood. There is nothing to be done."

He bowed with that singular grace the fencing-room had given him and went out by the door.

"Oh, it is cruel!" cried Aline, in a stifled voice, her hands clenched, and she sprang to the window.

"Aline!" her uncle's voice arrested her. "Where are you going?"

He called after her, imperiously commanding her return. But Aline—dutiful child—closed her ears lest she must disobey him, and sped light-footed across the lawn to the avenue, there to intercept the departing Andre-Louis.

As he came forth wrapped in gloom, she stepped from the bordering trees into his path.

"Aline!" he cried, joyously almost.

"I did not want you to go like this," she explained herself. "I know that his great soft heart will presently melt. He will send for you, and he will not know where to send."

"You think that?"

"Oh, I know it! You arrive in a bad moment. He is peevish and cross-grained, poor man, since he came here. He wearies himself away from his beloved Gavrillac. Brittany, you must know, was becoming too unsafe. The chateau of La Tour d'Azyr was burnt to the ground some months ago. And for this and his present discomfort he blames you and your friends. But he will come round presently. And then we shall want to know where to find you."

"At number 13, Rue du Hasard."

"Tell me, Andre." She paused, as if in some difficulty, and then went on, her eyes upon the ground: "Tell me—the truth of that event at the Feydau."

The request fetched a frown to his brow. He suspected at once the thought that prompted it. Quite simply and briefly he gave her his version of the affair.

"That is much what I was told," she said. "But it was added that M. de La Tour d'Azyr had gone to the theater expressly for the purpose of breaking finally with La Binet. Do you know if that was so?"

"I don't; nor of any reason why it should be so. La Binet provided him the sort of amusement that he and his kind are forever craving . . ."

"Oh, there was a reason," she interrupted him. "I was the reason. I spoke to Mme. de Sautron. I told her that I would not continue to receive one who came to me contaminated in that fashion." She spoke of it with obvious difficulty, her color rising as he watched her half-averted face.

"M. de Sautron conveyed my decision to him, and afterwards represented him to me as a man in despair, repentant, ready to give proofs—any proofs—of his sincerity and devotion to me. He told me that M. de La Tour d'Azyr had sworn to him that he would cut short that affair, that he would see La Binet no more. And then, on the very next day I heard of his having all but lost his life in that riot at the theater."

"Oh, if M. de La Tour d'Azyr has sworn . . ." Andre-Louis was laughing on a bitter note of sarcasm.

Either she did not hear or did not heed him.

"You do not of your own knowledge know that it was not as M. de La Tour d'Azyr asserts—that he went to the Feydau that night?"

"I don't," he admitted. "It is, of course, possible. But does it matter?"

"It might matter. Tell me; what became of La Binet after all?"

"I don't know."

"You don't know?" She turned to consider him. "And you can say it with that indifference! I thought . . I thought you loved her, Andre."

"So did I, for a little while. I was mistaken. It required a La Tour d'Azyr to disclose the truth to me. They have their uses, these gentlemen. They help stupid fellows like myself to perceive important truths."

They had reached the wrought-iron gates at the end of the avenue. Through these they beheld the waiting yellow chaise which had brought Andre-Louis. From near at hand came the creak of other wheels, the beat of other hoofs, and now another vehicle came in sight, and drew to a standstill. The lady who occupied the carriage, perceiving Aline, waved to her and issued a command.

CHAPTER IV

THE footman opened the door, letting down the steps and proffering his arm to his mistress to assist her to alight. She was a woman of something more than forty, who once must have been very lovely, who was very lovely still with the refining quality that age brings to some women. Her dress and carriage alike advertised great rank.

"I take my leave here, since you have a visitor," said Andre-Louis.

"But it is an old acquaintance of your own, Andre. You remember Mme. la Comtesse de Plougastel?"

He looked at the approaching lady and because she was named to him he recognized her. He must, he thought, have recognized her without prompting anywhere at any time, and [illegible] although it was some sixteen years since last he had seen her. The sight of her brought it all back to him—a treasured memory that had never permitted itself to be entirely overlaid by subsequent events.

When he was a boy of ten, on the eve of being sent to school at Rennes, she had come on a visit to his godfather, who was her cousin. The great lady, in all the glory then of her youthful beauty, with her gentle, cultured voice—and her majestic air of the great world, had scared him a little at first. Very gently had she allayed those fears of his, and by some mysterious enchantment she had completely enslaved his regard.

For three days whilst she had been at Gavrillac, he had gone daily to the manor, and so had spent hours in her company. A childless woman with the maternal instinct strong within her, she had taken this precociously intelligent, wide-eyed lad to her heart.

"Give him to me, Cousin Quintin," he remembered her saying on the last of those days to his godfather. "Let me take him back with me to Versailles as my adopted child."

But the Seigneur had gravely shaken his head in silent refusal, and there had been no further question of such a thing. And then, when she said goodby to him—the thing flooding back to him now—there had been tears in her eyes.

"SO PLEASED, MADAME, THAT HE HAS SHOWN ME THE DOOR," SAID ANDRE-LOUIS.

"Think of me sometimes, Andre-Louis," had been her last words.

But all was vividly remembered now upon beholding her again, after sixteen years, profoundly changed and matured, the girl sunk in this worldly woman with the air of calm dignity and complete self-possession. Yet, he insisted, he must have known her anywhere again.

Aline embraced her affectionately, and then answering the questioning glance with faintly raised eyebrows that madame was directing toward Aline's companion—

"This is Andre-Louis," she said. "You remember Andre-Louis, madame?"

Madame checked. Andre-Louis saw the surprise ripple over her face, taking with it some of her color, leaving her for a moment breathless.

And then the voice—the well-remembered rich, musical voice—richer and deeper now than of yore, repeated his name:

"Andre-Louis!"

Her manner of uttering it suggested that it awakened memories, memories perhaps of the departed youth with which it was associated.

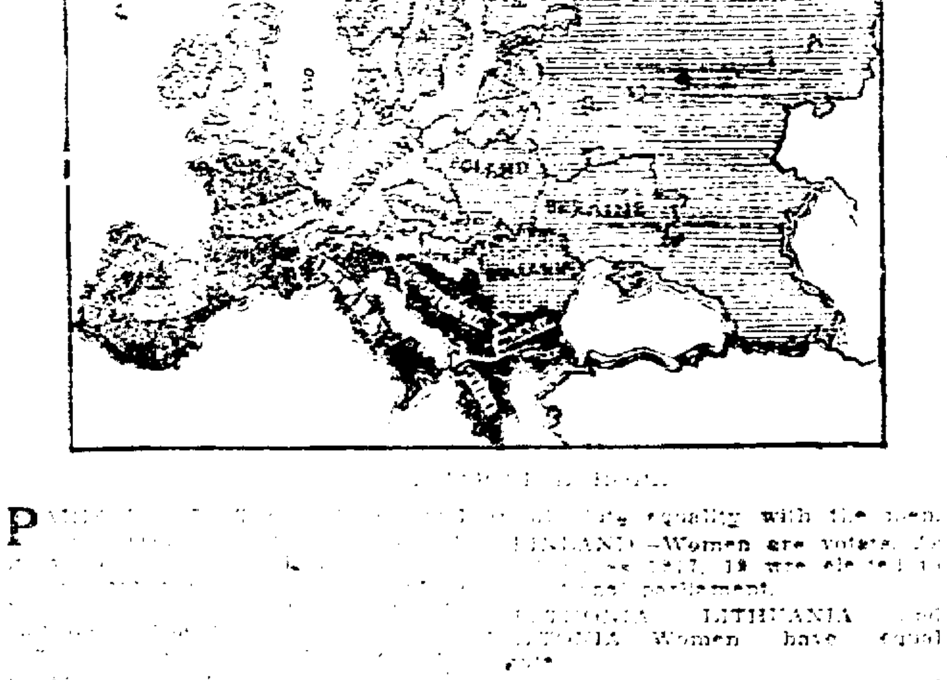

"But of course I remember him," she said at last, and came toward him, putting out her hand. He kissed it dutifully, submissively, instinctively. "And this is what you have grown into?" She appraised him, and he flushed with pride at the satisfaction in her tone. He seemed to have gone back sixteen years, and to be again the little Breton lad at Gavrillac. She turned to Aline. "How mistaken Quintin was in his assumptions. He was pleased to see him again, was he not?"

"So pleased, madame, that he has shown me the door," said Andre-Louis.

"Ah!" She frowned, conning him still with those dark, wistful eyes of hers. "We must change that, Aline. I will plead for you, Andre-Louis. I am a good advocate."

Whom Shall Molly Marry?

IT was lunch hour. Molly left the Wheeler Works briskly with purpose in her eye. She darted into the nearest drug store, snatched a sandwich and glass of buttermilk, whisked out again and down to Billy Farton's office.

This office was half studio and Molly loved its rambling shabbiness and charm, its prints and casts and odds and ends Billy had picked up in youthful ramblings abroad.

Billy looked up from a long drawing-table littered with the materials of his work—looked up and smiled so gladly at sight of her that she felt the blood rising in her cheeks.

"Ha, if it isn't Mistress Molly." He came toward her, both hands held out, a figure of charm, blond hair awry as if he had been raking it with reflective fingers, his old gray office coat revealing the fine lines of a thin, muscular figure and about his eyes and mouth a boyish gaiety.

"Mistress Molly—from the enemy's camp. Come, give the countersign—are you friend or enemy?"

"Never enemy, Billy! Friend surely—as good a one as you'll let me be. A friend needing your help."

"It's yours, if the will for it means anything. I guess you know that."

"Don't promise rashly, Billy," she said, looking seriously into his face with the soft, brooding eyes of a girl who is asking silent questions of herself as well as of the man before her.

"I can't be cautious where you're concerned. . . . Well, what do you want me to do?"

"Help me melt the hard metal in Ben Wheeler, make him more human, more than human being you are, Billy dear." The feeling that crept into her tone surprised even Molly herself and she stopped abruptly.

Billy turned away, absently knocking out his pipe against the old marble mantelpiece, pondering her strange request. When he faced her again he looked deeply troubled.

"To what end, Molly?"

"Isn't that end enoughZ"

Well, then, with what result? That I may all the more surely lose you?" He stood a little away from her, yet Molly had a strange feeling as if he were holding her hands warmly, tightly.

"Listen, Molly. I haven't pestered you with declarations. I saw you were groping in your own heart. But you know I want you as I want air and sunlight and strength and hope and courage.

"I have tried to let you find yourself before I said the obvious. I knew it would not be speeches that would win you, but deeds. I felt, too, that when you knew yourself better you would know which of us men means most to you.

"But—when you ask me to help you choose another man"—His voice grew husky—"this Ben Wheeler, hard-minded, hard-hearted maker of steel knives, who breaks his word and tries to break me—"

"That is true, Billy. Nevertheless, I still ask for your help in making him—different. And I promise nothing in return because I don't know what will happen myself. I ask you to do this terribly difficult thing—for me. Will you, Billy?"

He turned and walked to hte window without speaking.

Congressman-Flier Falls

CONGRESSMAN MANUEL HERRICK, IN THE HERRICK PLANE. STANDING, E. G. PERSON, THE CONGRESSMAN'S PILOT.

MEMPHIS, July 7.—Congressman Manuel Herrick, of Oklahoma, who bought an airplane from the War Department and started to fly it home for use in his campaign for re-election, didn't get far—by plane. He and E. G. Person, his pilot, were both injured, not seriously, when the plane fell a short time after leaving Memphis. Engine trouble was the cause.

Herrick continued on by train to fill his speaking engagements.

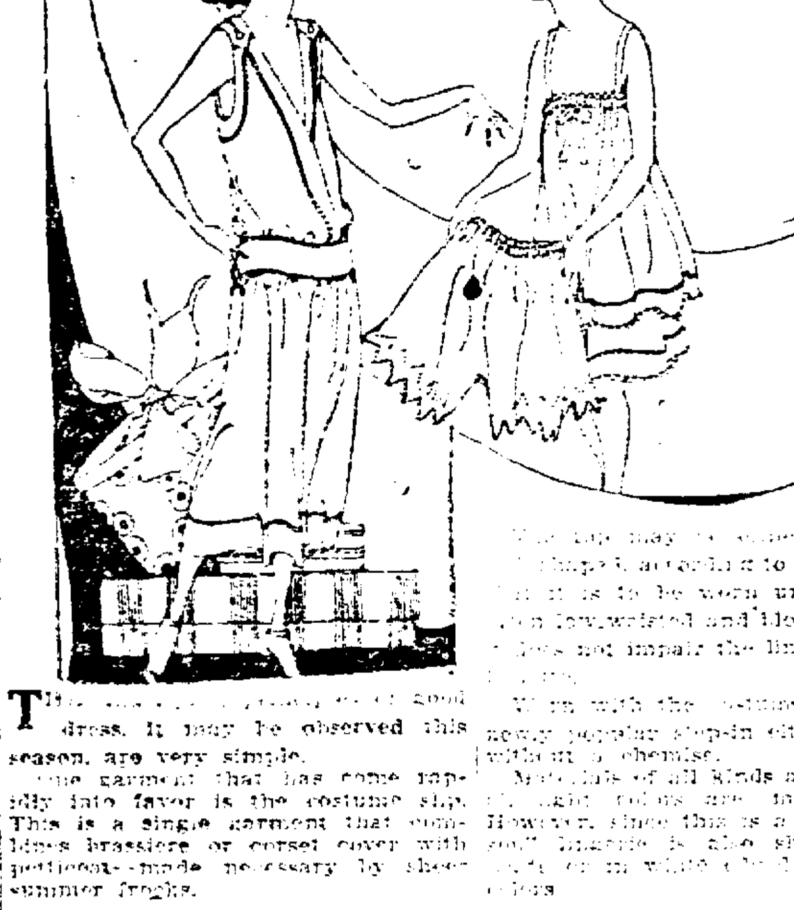

Before leaving Memphis, Herrick denied that he contemplated withdrawing from politics.

"Some of the smart alecs have been spreading the report that I am going to cut up high jinks at country fairs in my air flivver," he said. "I expect to become an expert flyer, able to do all sorts of didoes, but I am not going to desert the people now for my own pleasure.

"If a fellow is going to run for Congress against a lot of millionaire candidates, he has to pull off some stunt that will at least attract the voters."

Hence the $600 Herrick airpane.

Sheer Summer Dresses Bring Costume Slips Into Favor

THE [illegible] good dress, it may be observed this season, are very simple.

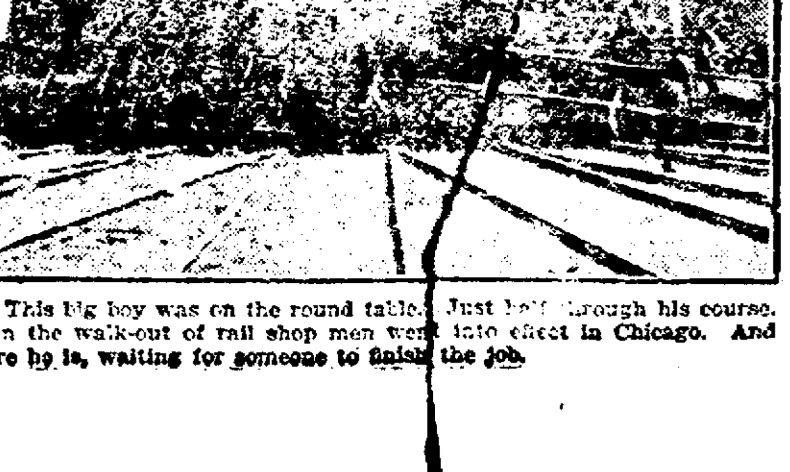

One garment that has come rapidly into favor is the costume slip. This is a single garment that combines brassiere or corset cover with petticoat—made necessary by sheer summer frocks.

The top may be either square or [illegible] shaped, according to the [illegible] it is to be worn under, and is often low-waisted and bloused so that it does not impair the line of the silhouette.

Worn with the costume slip is the newly popular step-in either with or without a chemise.

Materials of all kinds are used and light colors are most popular. However, since this is a "white season," lingerie is also shown in all white or in white [illegible] with pastel colors.

Deserted at the Table

This big boy was on the round table. Just half through his course. Then the walk-out of rail shop men went into effect in Chicago. And there he is, waiting for someone to finish the job.

SAMPLING OF "WET" EVIDENCE BY JURORS BANNED IN FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE Fla., July 6.—Jurors sitting in liquor cases in Florida in future are expected to sidestep invitations to taste the liquid evidence, for the State Supreme court opines that such a practice may be a violation of the Volstead act.

The court's opinion was expressed in a lengthy decision quashing the information by the circuit court, because judgement of a county court and after the defendant was convicted on evidence obtained without a search warrant. When the defendant was on trial in the county court members of the jury were permitted to sip the evidence. In discussing this phase, after severely criticising the obtaining of evidence in an "illegal" manner, the decision said.

"Even where all the jurors drink of the liquor, this is a very questionable proceeding and may be a violation of the Volstead act."

Red-haired people are said to be less subject to baldness than others.

MISS BAUER FOR THIRD TIME HAS BROKEN RECORDS

NEW YORK, July 6.—For the third time within a week Miss Sybil Bauer of the Illinois Athletic Club, today smashed world's record marks, when she defeated Miss Dorothy Donahue of the women's swimming association of New York, in a 440 yard swim at the Manhattan Beach lagoon. The time was six minutes, 38 3-5 seconds, 11 and 2-5 seconds lower than the previous world's record established by her in 1921 in the Illinois Athletic Club.

NEDDA TROTS TO VICTORY IN 2:05 TROTTERS RACE

NORTH RANDALL, CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 6.—(Associated Press.)—Trotting one of the greatest heats ever witnessed at North Randall track, Nedda, owned by the Hill and Dale farm, Mamaroneck, N. Y., and driven by H. Fleming, won the trotting sweepstakes for 2:05 trotters, the feature of the grand circuit racing card here today. Several very close finishes marked the day's racing.

Getting away to a bad start in the first heat, Nedda apparently out of it, gradually overtook her field, one of the fastest in training, and trotted the distance in 2.02 3-4, three seconds faster than the time for the heat to win. She trotted the last three quarters in 1:30 1-2, the last half in 59 1-2 and the last quarter in 29 1-2 seconds. Nedda got away in front in the second heat and held the lead all the way, withstanding the challenge of the field which was well bunched down the back stretch, and won it and the race easily.

The time for the race was the fastest trotted this season. With Nedda eased out and E. Colorado withdrawn Great Britton had no trouble annexing the third heat in 2:04 3-4. The time for the first two heats was 2.05 3-4 and 2:03 3-4.

The Fasig sweepstakes for three year old trotters was won by Alma Worth, owned by H. S. Grayson, of Washington Pa., and driven by Lon McDonald, of Indianapolis, in straight heats.

Four heats were necessary to decide the second division of the 2:21 trot which was captured by Bobbin. The first division will be decided tomorrow.

KEARNS IS OFFERED $100,000 FOR FIGHT

CHICAGO, July 6.—(Associated Press.)—Jack Kearns, manager for Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, announced tonight he had received an offer of $100,000 with a provision for fifty per cent. of the gate receipts for Dempsey to box Harry Greb, light heavyweight champion, at Pittsburgh on Labor Day.

TILDEN TO PLAY W. WESTBROOK

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., July 6.—William T. Tilden, 2nd, Philadelphia, world champion, will play Walter Westbrook, Detroit, and Zenzo Shimizu Japanese Davis cup player, will meet Charles Garland, Jr., Pittsburg, in the semi-fin l matches of the twelfth national senior Clay court tennis championship singles as a result of victories today at the Woodstock Country Club.

Westbrook and Shimizu will play Friday, and the other semi-final match will be played Saturday.

Wray Brown, of St. Louis, Washington University player, who was the surprise runner-up in the intercollegiate championship singles at Philadelphia last week, pushed Tilden the hardest he has been played during the tournament. Tilden's overhead drives, however, won the first set, 6-4 and he took the set and match 6-2. Brown is the first man to have taken more than two games from Tilden here.

Shimizu quickly disposed of Theodore Drewes, St. Louis, 6-1, 6-0, and Westbrook defeated Arthur Hubbell, Chicago 6-3, 6-4.

Garland defeated Fritz Bastian, Indianapolis 6-0, 6-4.

SIX OCTOGENARIANS IN BOYCE

BOYCE, July 6.—Six persons live in the town of Boyce who are octogenarians. The youngest of these is Mrs. Elizabeth Matilda Berlin, who on the 6th of last April celebrated her eighty-first birthday. She is a highly esteemed Christian citizen.

Mrs. Berlin has been a member of the Methodist church nearly sixty-seven years, and attends that church regularly and others frequently.

With the assistance of a girl eleven years old she attends to her own domestic affairs and also cares for a boarder. She is often seen in her garden and attending to her chickens. She is possessed of one of the Christian graces much needed, "a meek and quiet spirit."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LEADERS PLANNING NEW UNIVERSITY

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—Christian Science leaders are considering the construction of a two million dollar college near St. Louis, it was announced today.

C. T. S. TEAM IS NATIONAL CHAMP

CHATHAM, Va., July 6.—Information recently received by Colonel A. H. Camden of the Chatham Training School announced the fact that the C. T. S. Rifle Team had been declared winer of the championship of the United States. This is quite an honor for the Chatham Training School and the school authorities are much elated over their success. The privates composing this team were G. W. Oakes, Jr., South Boston; N. R. Green, Richardsville, Va.; Jno. A. Moses, Chatham; H. G. Goode, Henry, Va.; R. A. and S. L. Creath, Paces, Va.; E. W. Shelton, Jr.; Buffalo Junction, Va.; H. L. Arthur, Roanoke; N. A. Cumby, Blackstone, Va.; R. H. Reynolds, Long Island, Va.; A. E. Griffith, Wenonda, Va.; J. A. Thomas, Catawba, Va.; G. S. Goode, Mosley Junction, Va.; J. H. Harper, Dry Fork, Va.; R. S. Reynolds, Long Island, Va.; W. A. Watson, Darlington Heights, Va., and J. M. Fulwell, Lynchburg. This same team won the loving cup for being the best team in this corps area which was presented before the School closed for the past session.

The splendid rain which began falling Monday night and lasted through the day Tuesday has been of inestimable value to the crops and farmers are feeling fine at the prospects. Late tobacco has taken on new life and crops of all kinds are growing rapidly. In some sections the rainfall was very heavy but no damage has been reported. H. D. Shepherd of the Business Mens Association of this place will on Saturday next address the farmers of the Ringgold section at eleven o'clock. Mr. Shepherd's remarks will have to do with the Co-operative Marketing Association and the farmers are now relazing the splendid benefits to be derived from becoming members of the association and doing their part to make it a grand success.

Mrs. F. M. Green of Clifton Forge, Mr. Tyler Shelton of Charleston, W. Va., and Mrs. G. W. Johnson of Roanoke, were very recently called home on account of the illness of their mother, Mrs. E. C. Shelton, who has been ill at her home on Depot street, but now rapidly improving.

Dr. M. T. Fitzgerald and family of Clarksville, Va., were guests of his mother, Mrs. Hattie A. Fitzgerald, on the fourth, returning on Wednesday.

Mr. C. L. Craddock, of near Whittles, was on Monday night taken to Richmond for medical treatment. Mr. Craddock had been sick for several days.

Miss Nellie Thompson left on Wednesday to take the summer course at Columbia University.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Carter and Mrs. Ernest Stevens left on Thursday for Junaluska Springs, N. C., to spend several weeks.

DANVILLE HAS WON EIGHT OF LAST 11 GAMES

The Danville baseball team had won six successive games up to yesterday, when the Raleigh team broke its winning streak. Of the last eleven games played, Danville has won 8, and, strangely enough, all three of these lost were dropped to the Raleigh club.

The victories were over the following teams: June 23 and 24, won from Winston-Salem; June 26 and 27 won from Durham; June 30 and July 1, won from Durham; July 3, won from Greensboro.

On next Monday and Tuesday, the Tobacconists will play at home with Greensboro as their opponent, and it is possible that the postponed game of July 4th will be played off in a double-header.

July 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th Danville plays away from home, with Raleigh and Winston-Salem as opponents, and on the 17th and 18th will play the Twins in Danville.

The complexion of July 19th is decidedly favorable to the Abbottites and, if they can keep up their present batting and pitching, they stand a good show of winning a majority of the games scheduled.

Firestone
GUM-DIPPED CORDS
-and Their High Mileage Records

The high mileage records of Firestone Cords continue to emphasize the fact that Firestone methods are different and better. These records, steadily increasing in number and in mileage totals, justify the Firestone contention that there is one best way to build tires.

Among the primary sources of Firestone extra mileage is double gum-dipping—the saturation of the cord plies in a vat of liquid gum—thus coating each cord and virtually eliminating internal heat and friction.

Another is Firestone air bag curing, with its 290 pound pressure, which places every cord accurately and equalizes the tension.

By blending the rubbers of different plantations and types, and by tempering it before mixing, Firestone men add still more mileage.

Many cord tires are good—a few are better—Firestone users say one is best.

Those who have already experienced Firestone mileage, have stopped shopping and experimenting—they have made these cords standard equipment. Investigate your friends' success with Firestone Cords—and buy your next tire accordingly. Come in and get your share of extra mileage.

BUSINESS MUCH BETTER IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—General improved business conditions in the country are reflected in increased customs receipts the highest during the past fiscal year for 133 years according to a statement issued tonight by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Elmer Dover, in charge of customs.

"The United States customs receipts for the fiscal year just ended," he said, "amount to $356,443,387, which is an increase of $45,415,285 over last year. The highest previous year in the history of the customs covering 133 years, was 1910 when receipts amounted to $333,683,445 so that the receipts for this year are nearly $23,000,000 in excess of the largest previous year."

PRINCE OF WALES SLATED TO BE BEST MAN AT WEDDING

MISS EDWINA ASHLEY BRITAIN'S RICHEST BRIDE AND HER HUSBAND-TO-BE, PRINCE LOUIS MOUNTBATTEN

BY MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, July 7.—The Prince of Wales future ruler of Great Britain will be best man when England's richest bride takes her marriage vow at St. Margaret's church July 18—unless court rules forbid.

The bride is Miss Edwina Ashley, daughter of Colonel Wilfrid Ashley, member of Parliament. She's the heiress of the multimillionaire Sir Ernest Cassel, her grandfather, financial adviser to King Edward.

On her father's side she claims descent from the Indian princess Pocahontas; on her mother's side, from a line of Jewish princes who ruled Israel in Biblical days.

The bridegroom is Prince Louis Mountbatten, pal of the Prince of Wales who acted as aide to the prince on his world tour, just ended.

There is not much "side" or swank about the future princess; she is just as much of a regular girl as her sweetheart is a regular fellow.

The other day as summer cleaning operations were in full swing in the vicar-general's register office, a tall, graceful young woman stepped in and asked for a license.

She explained her future husband was on the high seas and had asked her to get the document.

"What's your name, miss?" asked the matter-of-fact clerk.

"Edwina Cynthia Annette Ashley."

That should have meant something in his old life but it didn't.

"Whom do you wish to marry?"

"Lord Louis Mountbatten."

This time there was real action.

"What's that?" the clerk queried.

She repeated the name.

"What's his full name?" asked the clerk, still dubious.

"Louis Francis Albert Victor Nicholas, Lord Mountbatten," the girl replied.

She added he was 22. Then she made the affidavit, signed the book, paid two pounds sterling fee, got the license and carried it away just like Mary Smith or Jenny Brown.

It's easy for a bowlegged girl to be modest.

The street car system could be improved by granting stopovers.

TRY THIS WITH YOUR BABY AT TEETHING TIME

New Cordial Called "Anti-Ferment." Originated By a Druggist and Recommended By Physicians, Proves Wonderful Aid in Keeping Babies from Becoming Upset During Teething Time.

No Opiates or Other Harmful Drugs. Safe and Immediately Effective. Pleasant in Taste.

The cutting of teeth is a tax on the infant's little system, which is reflected directly upon the stomach, the seat of all his troubles, what is commonly termed indigestion or improper elimination of toxic poisons that have accumulated on account of the fermentation of food in the stomach. If you will use Anti-Ferment with your baby at teething time you won't realize that baby is cutting teeth until they are through the gums. Anti-Ferment prevents food fermentation, keeps the stomach bowels and intestinal tract free of toxic poisons and irritations, and baby is perfectly normal all through this period.

Your doctor will approve the use of Anti-Ferment. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant in taste and yet very effective. Your druggist can supply you. Insist on Anti-Ferment for children.—adv.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS GIVE EXTREMISTS HARD SET-BACK

LONDON, July 6.—"The decision of the Independent Socialists to join the German Government as reported from Berlin today indicates how in the murdering of Dr. Walter Rathenau, the extremists have defeated their own ends," said a German to The Christian Science Monitor representative today.

"Previously the Coalition only had a majority when supported by the Stinnes party—the German People's Party—whose sentiments are really monarchical, though recognizing the Republic as a necessary evil for the present. Now it will have an absolute majority (though small) without any outside support." The Vienna or Second and a Half International to which the Independent Socialists belong, has, since May, had a working agreement with the Majority Socialists of the Second International, and recent events in Germany have therefore probably only accelerated the transfer of the Independents' votes from the Opposition to the Government side.

As The Christian Science Monitor's informant points out, however, "tho it will considerably strengthen the Government's position by making it virtually independent of the industrial magnates, the latter's support is too valuable to be lightly discarded. The Government's new accession of strength, therefore, is not likely to cause any fundamental alteration of policy in a socialistic diltcreno ... in a socialistic direction."

How To Sew Slips For Summer Frocks

BY MARJORIE KINNEY

(This is the fourth of Miss Kinney's series on home dressmaking. Today she tells how to make slips for your summer frocks.)

SLIPS are an essential part of this summer's gowns and are so varied in cut and material they can be made to suit all kinds of dress.

They are often made of 40-inch silk or satin, using the selvage edges at the top of the camisole and the bottom of the skirt. If cut in this manner 54-inch is required for the average figure.

A very slight person can wear a 50-inch skirt and a person with unusually large hips will require more than 54-inch.

For model one mark a center front line in the middle of the material from selvage to selvage, as shown in drawing 3. From center front measure one-quarter bust plus two inches and mark for the under-arm line. Baste in a dart equivalent to one and one-half inches, basting to nothing about 10 inches below the waist line.

This dart comes under the arm. One dart should be pinned in to fit your figure between the center front and the under-arm and another back of the under-arm seam. Fifty-four-inch material will allow your slip to overlap about six inches in the back.

Snap it together here from top to hip line and catch together with a long French tack lower on the skirt.

This open back in the skirt allows freedom in walking, yet holds the slim silhouette.

Make Back Lower

The top of the back of the slip should be made one and one-half inches lower than the front. Fold under the selvage and let the fold run to nothing at the front.

This slip may be made with a seam on one side if one does not like a lapped back.

Number two is cut with small dart across the waist line, like the kimono dress pattern in my second article.

These models can all slip on over the head with straps to hold them on the shoulder.

The straps are pretty made of two thicknesses of flesh-colored georgette, chiffon or marquisette with picoted edges or hemmed together. The flesh-colored strap is suitable for any slip, light or dark.

Trimmings

There is an endless variety of pretty trimmings to use on these slips. The top and bottom should be treated in the same way.

Here are a few suggestions. Bind both top and bottom with the material itself, or with a shade darker.

If 40-inch does not give young a long enough slip have a fold of material hemstitched to the top and bottom. Usually the bottom band is wider than the one at the top of the camisole.

For lace and chiffon dresses it is pretty to set folds of chiffon, georgette or some material thinner than your slip to the top and bottom edges. Have them hemstitched to these edges.

Scalloped Work

Scalloped bottoms and tops like No. 2 are effective. Plan your scallops exactly to fit the bottom and top edge. Use one scallop unit as a pattern and mark around the scallop with colored thread or chalk.

If you are binding the scallops stitch the binding onto this line before you cut out your scallops. If you are sewing lace to the scallops stitch by machine around the scalloped line, then cut and whip on your lace.

In this way you do not stretch your raw edges.

Tests Of Higher Education Can Be Met In U. S.

BOSTON, July 6.—The tests by which higher education in the United States can meet the legitimate demands of democracy were outlined tonight by Dr. Henry W. Holmes, dean of Harvard University Graduate School of Education in addressing the convention of the National Education Association.

The colleges, he asserted, will meet these demands, first, if many types of education can be provided; second, if the economic bar can be lowered, and third, if selection can be made without discrimination in favor of those of any particular type of mnd.

"Democracy," sai dthe speaker, "requres of education more than a mere defense against the evils of illiteracy. It demands the development of positive loyalty to common ideals that are understood and freely adhered to. Does this mean that the common resources must be used to give every man and woman a college education?

"Mental and educational tests show that there are limits beyond which it is unprofitable to educate many thousands of boys and girls in the schools as they are now constituted. On the other hand, higher education may be given with great profits to many who do not now receive it. There is an economic selection at work which the colleges, even those maintained by the State, cannot wholly overcome, but at least they ought to counteract it. This is a problem in the administration of public funds and private benefactions for the education of those who lack the means to support themselves through college, but have the ability to meet the intellectual standards in order to receive greater numbers

"The last thing the colleges ought to do is to lower intellectual standards in order to receive greater numbers. They ought to seek rather to equalize opportunity on the economic side while they hold standards high."

It is a mistaken policy, Dr. Holmes asserted, which insists that education of collegiate grade shall be open only to "those of bookish mind."

"There is probably a basic factor of general intelligence," he continued, "without which no course to collegiate grade can be successfully undertaken, but it is doubtful if our psychological examinations really distinguish and test this factor."

STATEMENTS IN KIDNAPPING OF BRUCE BIELASKI

MEXICO CITY, July 6.—(By The Associated Press)—Formal statements in writing dealing with the recent kidnapping of A. Bruce Bielaski, former head of the bureau of investigation of the American department of justice, were presented in court today by Mrs. Bielaski and Senora Manual Barcenas, wife of the Mexican lawyer who was kidnapped at the same time.

Mr. Bielaski and Senor Barcenas were in court until midnight last night writing their versions of the incident, which were slowly translated into Spanish to the judge. Other members of the Bielaski party had previously submitted statements.

Mr. Bielaski told The Associated Press today that his subpoena to appear in a local court to make a statement was the only legal process to which he had been subjected.

"I was most courteously requested by the local court," he said, "to submit in writing my story of the kidnapping. The authorities have been extremely considerate, and there was no intimation that my arrest was to be ordered or that I was to be taken to Cuernavaca for a hearing. The request for a formal statement was to be expected, in view of the searching investigation which the authorities are making of the incident."

BAPTISTS WILL MEET AT BEACH

NORFOLK, Va., July 6.—Sunday will be the big day in the program of the Baptist encampment at Virginia Beach, which opened today with a convention of representatives from the Baptist Young Peoples Union of the state. Dr. George W. Truett of Dallas, Texas, one of the most noted Baptist preachers of the country, will deliver sermons noon and evening.

After the B. Y. P. U. convention closes Saturday the convention of the organized bible classes will begin. The bible class session will include addresses by Dr. J. McKee Adams H. L. Strickian, Miss Jessie Burrall Dr. H. E. Tralle and P. E. Wagner.

Each day next week there will be Sunday school workers and women's missionary union meetings to discuss plans of work for their respective groups.

NEWS FROM GRETNA

GRETNA, Va., July 6.—Despite the rainy weather, a very large crowd was in Gretna throughout the Fourth. The ball game scheduled for the Fourth could not be played that day but a large crowd again returned on the "5" to witness the game and air flights. Many town and country people have availed themselves of this opportunity to sail in the air. Mrs. J. T. Brumfield was the first lady to go up. Among the others who went up were Dr. E. H. Keyser, H. E. Little, Claiborne Creasy, Acy Owen and Blount Mattox. Wm. H. Filmore and his assistants, Lowell Bass and F. E. Young of Danville, will remain in Gretna the rest of the week for flights. The weather is now ideal for flying and doubtless many flights will be made Friday and Saturday. Mr. Filmore flew from Danville to Gretna on the evening of July 3, in 18 minutes.

The people in Pigg River Magisterial district are at last awakening to the needs and advantages of good roads. A large and enthusiastic gathering of Pigg River citizens appeared before the county board of Supervisors at their regular meeting at Chatham on July 1, asking that an improved road be built either from Gretna through the district to the Franklin county line near Penhook, or from Climax leading out from Chatham to said point near Penhook. The citizens near both proposed roads were so much concerned as to which road should be built, the board finally ordered an election to be held at the several voting precincts in Pigg River district on July 10, that all elegible voters and all land owners may decide by ballot which of the proposed roads shall be built. Arrangements for building the road will again as soon as possible after the election.

Corn and tobacco crops in this section are looking promising thus far than for many years. We have had an excellent season and the crops have been well worked. The oat crop is also good.

Reports from the Eastern North Carolina and from South Carolina state that the tobacco crop has been seriously damaged by the continued heavy rains for the past six weeks.

Gas Taster Makes Debut At Capital

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 5—The latest champion to be crowned is a Washingtonian whose sense of taste is developed to a point where he can tell whether there is water in gasoline.

He not only claims to be able to perform this stunt with absolute accuracy, but demonstrated to a skeptical audience yesterday at a Pennsylvania avenue filling station.

The stranger had stopped for a supply of "gas." Upon receiving his change, he departed, only to return in a few minutes to complain that the gasoline he had purchased was largely water.

The attendants at the filing station were polite but insisted that no water was sold there as gasoline. They explained where and how they obtained their fuel, and offered to back it against any "gas" in the country.

"But I tasted it I tell you and I know there is water in it," insisted the stranger.

"You did what?" inquired the stupefied mechanic.

"I tasted it and I can tell by the taste whether there is water in gasoline or not" challenged the motorist.

This was too much for the attendant, who turned the aggrieved one over to the manager. The manager being a man of resourse, called for a test to convince the stranger that "adulterated gasoline" was not carried on their price list.

A chamois skin will resist water while allowing gasoline to pass through. It is a simple and reliable test of motor fuel so a chamois skin was produced and the gasoline was run through it. To the horror of the manager and the employes, a great quantity of water remained in the chamois skin.

The second attempt produced cinders water and mud. The owners of the station were notified and a gasoline expert was sent. He found great quantities of water and ordered the gas pumped out and strained.

A survey of the yard showed that during the recent heavy rains a pool of water had collected at the tank intake, which had apparently leaked.

How did you find out?" the gasoline expert inquired.

"A fellow tasted it," he was told.

Convinced that he was not being made the object of a joke the gasoline expert listened to the story and at the conclusion made the statement that no matter what the occupation of the "gas" 'taster is at present, he could get more money by working for the oil companies.
